By Micheal Rios; photos by Micheal Rios and Mike Sarich

A rainy day back-up plan was in place, but unnecessary, as the rain stayed away and Tulalip was gifted a pleasant mid-60s, sunny spring day. The perfect Washington weather to bring the community out in droves to celebrate the Grand Opening of the Debra Barto Memorial Skate Spark and Alpheus “Gunny” Jones Sr. Ball Field on Friday, April 15.

Youth of all ages, adults, and elders took in the good weather, complimentary assortment of BBQ food, and a variety of entertainment now available with Tulalip’s very own skate park and ball field. Those who arrived early enough received a novelty t-shirt with a custom graphic commemorating the day’s event. The graphic was created by Tulalip artist Ty Juvinel.

There was a DJ playing hit music, providing the necessary soundtrack for the outdoor festivities. Taking place in and around the skate park were skate board clinics, demonstrations by local professionals, and even a skate competition for 12 & Under, 13-17, and 18 & Up. Members of the Skate Like A Girl organization were on hand with the equipment necessary to teach those with no skate boarding experiences the basics.

Meanwhile on the ball field, the younger kids were playing kickball and t-ball, while the older kids were busy showcasing their athletic prowess in spirited games of flag football.

Bouncy houses, face painting, and henna booths were also available to add in more variety to the grand opening celebration.

Giving even more significance to the day was the fact it was also Debra Barto’s, the skate park’s namesake, birthday. Members of Debra’s immediate family were on hand wearing pink remembrance shirts in her honor.

The Tulalip community looks forward to many more good days that see the skate park and ball field being utilized by people, from young kids to adults and elders, with sports, activities and entertainment for all.

TULALIP'S GOT TALENT

Article/photos by Micheal Rios

On Thursday, April 14, the auditorium of Quil Ceda Tulalip Elementary was home to the vocal talents, hula-hooping skills, and even a couple celebrity impersonations provided by the student body.

The 2016 talent show was a great way to showcase the students, build their confidence, and bring the community together. It's a fun-filled event that appeals to all age groups and gives family and friends the perfect opportunity to capture long-lasting memories.

Several of the young aspiring singers covered Shawn Mendes hit song 'Stitches', while a few others utilized popular dance moves of 'Watch Me' (Whip/Nae Nae), and then there were those who made up their own choreography with hula-hoops.

The student body was blown away by their peer who snapped, crackled, and popped as Seattle hip-hop artist Macklemore. Closing this year's talent show was none other than the reincarnation of pop icon Michael Jackson.

In a surprise twist, the faculty of Quil Ceda Tulalip took over the stage decked out in Seattle Seahawks gear and performed their own dance routine for their delighted students.

On the T.R.A.I.L. to diabetes prevention

Article/photos by Micheal Rios

On the evening of Thursday, April 14, Tulalip Boys & Girls Club held an open registration for its very own T.R.A.I.L. healthy choices program. Its mission? To teach children the necessary steps to prevent diabetes and pre-diabetes.

“We are super excited to offer the community a very special hands-on practical prevention program for the kids at the Boys & Girls Club,” stated Veronica “Roni” Leahy, Tulalip Diabetes Care and Prevention Program Coordinator. “This is the first time a large scale collaboration between health clinic staff and the Trails Program staff has occurred. Together, we are offering diabetes prevention education delivered in a cooking class format with nutrition education geared towards kids!"

From 1990 to 2009 the incidence of type 2 diabetes in Native American/ Alaska Native youth increased by 110%, according to the Indian Health Service (IHS). Type 2 diabetes has been reported in Native American youth as young as four years of age, and IHS also reports that mortality rates for diabetes are 1.6 times higher for Native Americans compared to the U.S. general population.*

In 2003, the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI), IHS, Boys & Girls Clubs of America (BGCA), and Nike, Inc., initiated a prevention program aimed at reducing the onset of type 2 diabetes among Native youth. The program – On the T.R.A.I.L. (Together Raising Awareness for Indian Life) to Diabetes Prevention – is an innovative combination of physical, educational, and nutritional activities.

T.R.A.I.L. is a 12 chapter program that provides youth with a comprehensive understanding of healthy lifestyles in order to prevent type 2 diabetes. The program is presented with four themes: About Me, My Health, & Being Part of a Team; Healthy Eating; Making Smart Food Choices and My Healthy Community.

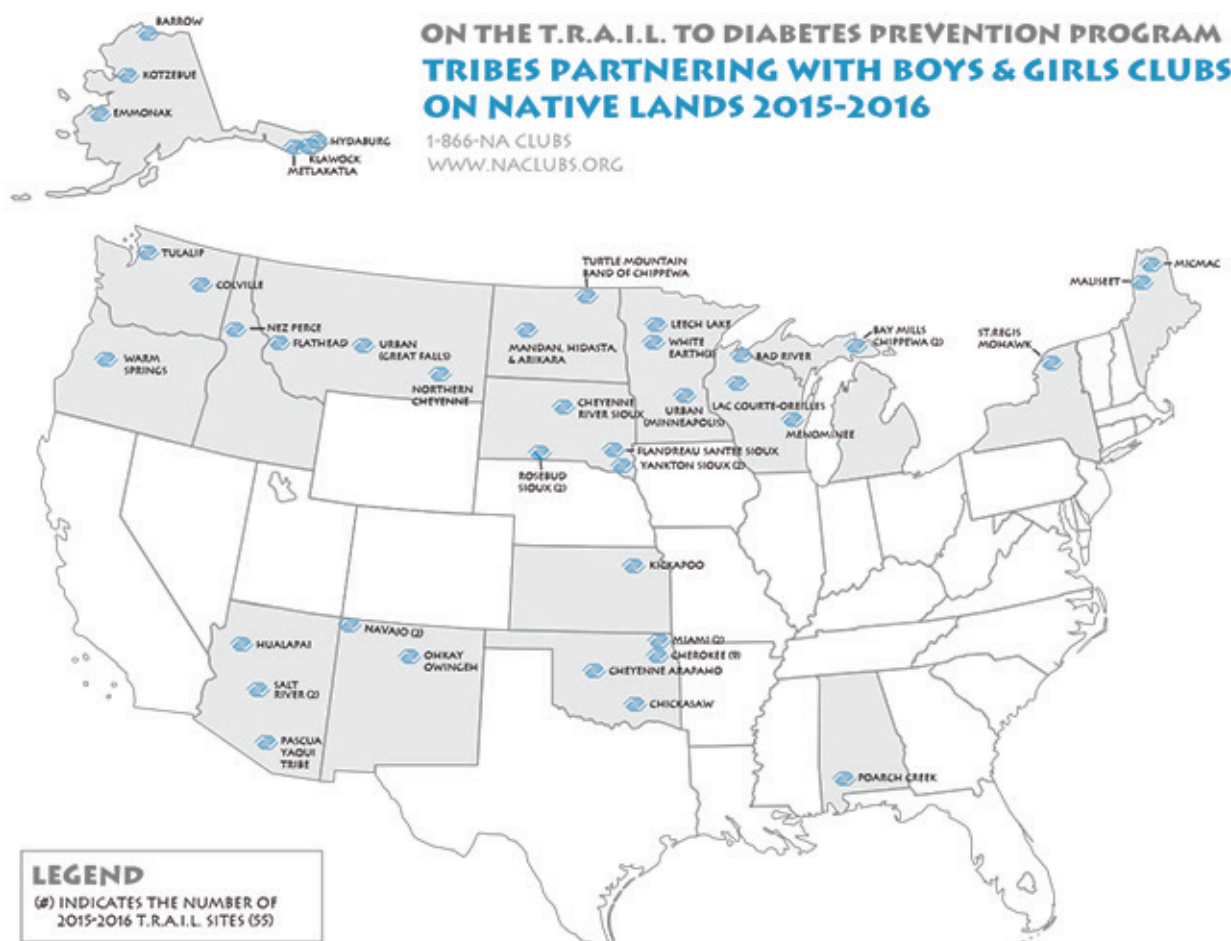

Woven throughout the program are self-esteem and prevention activities utilized by BGCA, including contributions from national evidence-based programs such as SMART Moves. Club members draw from Native traditions and history to learn about nutrition, food choices, media influences and the impact of type 2 diabetes.

The program also emphasizes the importance of teamwork and community service. Participants apply decision-making and goal setting skills in the physical activity challenges, and engage in service projects to improve healthy lifestyles in their communities. Community and family members participate in activities with the elementary-aged club members. These motivate members to achieve their goals and promote physical activity. The club sites are implementing the SPARK Physical Education and Nike Let Me Play programs to foster club-wide participation in fun physical activities and games for 60 minutes every day.

T.R.A.I.L. is currently funded at 55 participating club sites located in 18 states. Each of the Native Boys & Girls Club sites received the following to implement the T.R.A.I.L. program:

- A grant to fund program operations, including a part-time staff person and program training for one year.
- Evaluated program curriculum, training, and on-going technical assistance.

- Access to the SPARK Afterschool Physical Activity Program.

Each club member who registered to participate in the T.R.A.I.L. program received a box of fresh food from Klesick Farms and Haggen Grocery store, and their choice of an apple tree or blueberry bush. These boxes were valued at approximately $50.00 per box.

"The kids will learn how to grow, harvest and preserve fruit, berries & vegetables and we will use them in the meals we prepare together. Plus, they will personalize and develop their own cookbooks with the recipes," added Roni. "Our collaborative prevention team looks forward to working with your kids and sharing our knowledge and skills with them."

The T.R.A.I.L. program will hold sessions Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5:00 p.m. – 6:00 p.m. and Fridays from 3:00 p.m. – 4:00 p.m. in the Boys & Girls Club community room.

If you spend any time out in public, you are sure to encounter at least one small child having a huge melt down of emotion. Some parents feel confused by what is happening for their children in those moments. What is really going on?

Children experience the same emotions as adults do. Unfortunately, their brains do not yet have the capability to keep those emotions under control or "regulated". Emotion regulation is a very complex function in the brain and requires being able to identify what we are feeling, what happened to make us feel that way, and what we can do to bring ourselves back to calm.

Out of all the important life skills parents teach their children, none may be more important than the skill of learning to manage emotions. This is a skill that supports "school readiness" beyond any skill in reading or writing. It is also a skill that research suggests can help reduce the onset of some mental health symptoms.

So you may be asking yourself, "How do adults teach this skill to a child?" Research has shown that when an upset child is in the presence of a calm adult who is trying to understand what the child is feeling, children will be able to use the adult's sense of calm to help themselves get calm. Think back to a time when you were overwhelmed with a powerful emotion. If someone near you was meeting the same intensity of emotion as yourself, you may have found it difficult to get calm. Children have the same experience! Only when a child gets to a calm state can they take in information and "learn" from a situation.

In honor of the National Children's Mental Health Awareness week find out more information on a variety of topics that support children's mental health by attending the "Youth Mental Wellness Fair" happening on May 7th from 10-4 at Evergreen Middle School in Everett.

Be kind to yourself

By Kim Kalliber

The most meaningful relationship you will have is with yourself.

"And that's hard. In many tribes and many societies it's considered selfish to look at the relationship to yourself. But let's be honest, how many of you picked what you're wearing today? Why did you dress the way you dressed? Because you have a specific stake in your identity. You want to present yourself a certain way. You're not being egotistical. It's not bad to be in a relationship with yourself," explained Dr. Robert Macy, President of the International Trauma Center.

Dr. Macy spoke with Tulalip tribal members and employees on April 14 about Trauma Informed Care, which is an approach to recovery. He urged folks to "look very closely at your relationship with yourself because it deeply impacts your relationship with others. You start working on your relationship to yourself then move on to your relationship with others."

Trauma Informed Care is a treatment framework that involves understanding, recognizing and responding to the effects of all types of trauma. "There's a hundred and five ways to do it, there's not one prescribed method," explained Macy.

Trauma Informed Care asks you to consider the following: Look at any relationship, starting with the relationship you have with yourself, and ask yourself, am I using constraint, coercion, seclusion or isolation? Am I holding myself back? Am I using negative thoughts to hold me back, pin me down and feel negative about myself?

Coercion can show in how people act, even through emails and certain looks. If you are using or being used through coercion it will cause stress on you. If you're not reducing aggression then you're not really working on your relationship.

How do you reduce aggression against self? Through kindness and passion, you get a healthier heart with deeper inhalations, which benefits the entire body and mind. Work on calming your heart. If someone upsets you, you may need to vent, but just calm back down afterwards, don't carry it around with you. Learn to let go of judgment and that inner perfectionist. With daily practice, you can overcome self-criticism and focus on the good, praising yourself and your body. If you learn to accept yourself and treat your own body with the kindness it deserves, you may find yourself living with more energy and less pain, making you more resilient during tough times

"Trauma pins us down. What we know about our human bodies is that trauma always produces vulnerability. When you're in any type of relationship, with yourself, others, your job, vulnerability comes up. When you're in the deepest part of vulnerability, that is apparently where resiliency lies," said Macy, explaining that, with the right approach, the Trauma Informed Care approach, you get the ability to access that resiliency.

"People that mobilize against that which has hurt them, people that become collaborative and allow themselves to be creative and loving, and mobilize instead of being pinned down against that which has hurt them, those people tend to get stronger and tend to get more creative and tend to become what they never thought they could become. Especially after losing something."

Trauma is a memory in the body; it's not in the head. It's treatable, it can be identified and treated.
