Everett Community College celebrates diversity with dəx^whuyadadčəł opening

By Micheal Rios

Many Indigenous students, educators, and culture bearers assembled in the Monte Cristo building at Everett Community College (EvCC) on January 31 to celebrate a truly joyous occasion – a dedication ceremony to the EvCC Diversity and Equity Center's newest gathering space. A space where the identities and cultures of Native American, First Nations, and Pacific Islander students are reflected, supported and empowered on the college campus.

Tulalip and surrounding areas were hit with 6" and more of snow on Sunday, February 3 through Monday, February 4. Tribal offices and school districts were closed Monday and Tuesday due to snow and ice, with continued freezing temperatures. But many Tulalip community members took the opportunity to enjoy the rare snowy beauty and have some fun. Like 12 year-old Trinity Rodriguez-Parker, who it seems couldn't resist just flopping right in it! Photo by Christina Leea Parker.

Led by student-advocates, it's their shared vision that this space becomes a home where students feel a true sense of pride, safety, and belonging.

"It's amazing seeing a dream like this come true," marveled Kayah George, original student advocate for a Native space at EvCC. "I was once president of the First Nations Club and can remember the very first moments when the thought to create a place for our Indigenous students manifested in my mind. It was so long ago. I was just a young kid from the Rez, but I remember feeling like I didn't belong at this institution. I thought 'that's so wrong, my people have been here since time immemorial.'

"From there, this little dream of having a place on campus for our Aboriginal and Indigenous students to feel at home, to feel like themselves was created," continued Kayah. "This dream became more and more realistic as time went on. Suddenly, First Nations Club had more members, we got a campus garden, and next we were in talks to have our own room. There were so many points when I thought 'Is this really going to happen? Is this even real?' As I'm standing here today, at this moment, I can finally declare 'It's totally real!'"

The Stillaguamish Canoe Family opened the ceremony by sharing a song. Their rhythmic hand drum beats captivated many in the room, bringing a shared sense of unity and purpose to admiring onlookers. A design team from Stillaguamish created the actual framework for the newest EvCC gathering space. Their element of choice? Cedar, of course.

"Cedar has a protective quality. Its natural oils in the wood repels water and resists decay," explained Sam Barr, member of the Stillaguamish Canoe Family. "The cedar planks and walls that house this Native space came from our department. We hope it offers protection for your future gatherings and allows the students to learn in a more reflective environment."

Weeks prior to the opening celebration, EvCC Diversity and Equity Center staff reached out to Tulalip's own Lushootseed Department and offered the language warriors an opportunity to give the gathering space a traditional name. Tulalip tribal members and Lushootseed teachers, Michelle Balagot, Natosha Gobin, and Michelle Myles worked with First Nations Club students, past and present, to come up with an appropriate name. During the celebration, Natosha spoke the name and its meaning to the crowd.

"dax^whuyadadčəl," enunciated Natosha several times, allowing the audience to sound out the traditional Coast Salish term with her. "huyadadčəl means our way, our way of doing things, our way of life. dax^w means place where, reason why and by which.

"Out of six suggestions, this is the one students voted as the name of their space," continued Natosha. "It's the place where they can do things our way, it's the reason why they do things our way, and it's the means by which we do things our way. It's an Indigenous space to support Indigenous methodology, a place to decolonize, a sacred space to reflect and gain support from others on their education journey."

Lined with cedar planks, the walls of dax^whuyadadčəl hold a variety of tribal artwork, including an unforgettable large piece created by Louie Gong of Eighth Generation. There is also a collection of Indigenous reading materials for students to peruse in their free time. Among the books is Tulalip: From My Heart by Harriette Shelton Dover.

Following several cultural sharings by ‘Iwi Pono Club members, a blessing was offered by Tulalip culture bearer Carolyn Moses. She explained back in the ‘70s her husband attended Everett Community College and has had two granddaughters be EvCC students since then.

“I’m very honored to be here,” said Carolyn as she prepared her blessing song. “Our young people are our new warriors. The new warriors of our ancestors getting this education and moving forward to help our people. I’m here today to sing a song and bless everyone in this room today with cedar. Cedar is so strong and this blessing is to give us strength.”

Closing the celebration was a giveaway for everyone who played a critical role in creating dəxʷhuyadadčəl, giving Indigenous students on campus a place to gather.

Heritage basketball place 2nd at Districts

By Micheal Rios

Opening round: Hawks tame Cedar Park Lions, 52-32.

The Heritage Hawks boys basketball team steamrolled through the regular season and finished with an impressive (17-2) record. A high-octane offense averaged 74 points per game while a stingy defense only allowed 42 points to opponents, for a whopping average margin of victory of 30+ points. Prior to the season, these boys had one mission: win a State title. Nineteen regular season games later the mission remained unchanged.

District playoffs kicked off on Thursday, January 31. Heritage's regular season performance earned them a #2 seed and with it came the rights to host an opening round playoff game at Francy J. Sheldon gymnasium. Their opponent was the Lions of Cedar Park Christian. In their two previous meetings, Tulalip won both easily by 20+ points.

In front of an energetic home crowd, Heritage sputtered on offense to start. Midway through the 1st quarter Tulalip had yet to score and trailed 0-5. Coach Cyrus "Bubba" Fryberg called a timeout to light the fuse of urgency for his explosive team of young gunners. Did they respond? Most certainly.

The Hawks locked in, took complete control of the playoff game, and went on decisive 26-2 scoring run spanning late in the 2nd quarter. From trailing 0-5 to leading 26-7, the home team gave their crowd much to cheer for. Junior guard Leno Vela led the charge with his combination of dead-eye perimeter shooting and ball pressure yielding steal after steal. Tulalip took a 28-12 lead into halftime.

In the 2nd half, the rout continued. Heritage held the Lions to only 6 points in the 3rd quarter while both Joshes, Iukes and Miranda, added to Tulalip's scoring barrage from 3-point land. Entering the 4th quarter, the boys had their largest lead of the game up 23 points, 41-18.

With the outcome only a formality Coach Bubba inserted his bench players to finish the game. The Hawks starters cheered from the bench as everyone celebrated the 52-32 victory.

Leno led all scorers with 13 points and 6 steals. Josh Miranda added 12 points, while Rodney Barber collected a game-high 10 rebounds.

Championship round: Lummi Nation keeps Hawks grounded, 64-77.

Following their opening round win, the Tulalip Hawks had two days to prepare for the much anticipated District Championship game versus Lummi Nation. These two teams were clearly the best of the Northwest 1B league and had split their two regular season matchups. Tulalip won by 9 points back on December 8, but Lummi won by 3 points just two weeks ago on January 15. Both teams entered the game riding winning streaks, four straight Ws for Tulalip and an eye-popping nineteen consecutive wins for Lummi.

Being the Championship round, the game was held at the much larger venue of Marysville-Getchell High School on Saturday, January 2. Fans of both teams flooded the gymnasium and packed the bleachers for a lively atmosphere befitting a battle of two highly touted tribal teams.

In the 1st quarter, both teams traded early baskets notching the score at 5-5. Then Lummi clamped down on defense, leaving Tulalip reeling. Lummi came up with two big blocks and several steals that they turned into easy transition buckets. Meanwhile the Hawks offense couldn't muster any rhythm, which led to an 8-21 deficit after the opening period.

The Hawks trailed by double digits for most of the game. Early in the 3rd quarter, senior guard Paul Shay, Jr. kept the Hawks offense afloat by continually attacking the basket and drawing contact to get to the free-throw line. In fact, Jr. took eleven free-throws and connected on eight of them. When Isaac Comenote finally found a rhythm and hit back-to-back 3 pointers, Tulalip cut their deficit to just 9 points, 34-43 midway through the 3rd.

To their credit, every time it looked like Tulalip was getting momentum, Lummi responded with a bigger scoring run of their own.

Whether it was inside with their post players or hot outside shooting, they always had an answer and pushed their lead back to double digits. Heritage trailed 36-52 at the end of the 3rd quarter en route to a 64-77 loss. Lummi's 77 points was the most Tulalip had given up all season.

Paul Shay, Jr. led the Hawks with 19 points, while Alonzo Jones added 11 points and 9 rebounds. It was a disappointing loss in front of a packed gym, but even so Tulalip still placed 2nd in the tournament and earned the right to host an upcoming Tri-District Tournament game. The time and opponent is to be determined. However, we do know the game will be played on Saturday, February 9 at Heritage High School.

Why Study Linguistics

Submitted by Jeanne Steffener, Higher ED

You may be wondering what is linguistics and what do linguists do? Linguistics is the scientific study of language. Linguistics requires understanding of several areas which lies at the heart of linguistics, i.e. unconscious knowledge humans have about language; how children acquire language; the structure of language both in general and in individual languages; variances in languages, and how language influences the way we interact with each other and think about the world.

How does this apply to us? We all use language every single day but as babies, we are initially unable to communicate with adults using language. We begin by picking up single words in our vocabulary. By the time we reach five (5) or so, we begin to use words in sentences, making jokes and asking questions, etc. We have now acquired the ability to communicate, in simple ways, our thoughts and desires. Learning a language is difficult but we seem to effortlessly accumulate a wide range of knowledge about our language, English in our formative years. However, if you decide to learn another language as you get older, you will soon discover that it is not so easy. We assimilate nuances of word order, grammar, use of language in our communication with others.

How do we instinctively know these things? Well that is what linguistics is all about, it is a science. It is the study of how people acquire knowledge about their language and how this knowledge interconnects with their mental processes. Now there can be a variances among speakers and geographic regions. Linguists develop and test scientific theories. To test the scientific theories, linguists use statistical analysis, mathematics, and critical thinking about the patterns they observe.

The work of linguists involves learning about language rather than learning different languages. Many linguists do field work to collect evidence to help them gain understanding about specific languages or languages in general. Working with speakers of different languages, linguists discover patterns and document the language, search databases of spoken and written language, conduct carefully designed experiments with children and adults in schools, in the field and in university laboratories.

In the study of linguistics, you gain insight into human knowledge and behavior, by looking at aspects of human language, such as sounds, words, sentences and the meaning of words. You will also observe how language can change over time and how it can vary from situation to situation, how people learn a language and how people process language. You will probably learn at least one other language and study other courses in related areas such as, anthropology, cognitive psychology, cognitive science, communication sciences, computer science or philosophy. Students who major in linguistics gain transferrable skills such as the ability to be analytical and conduct research, precise written and verbal communication and a good grasp of language. With these skills, linguistics majors are well equipped for graduate-level and professional programs and careers. You can also go into professional programs such as: law school, speech pathology, audiology, communication sciences and disorders, or library and information sciences.

Career opportunities for linguists include work in industry, education, as translators or interpreters, work in the publishing industry, as a consultants on language for legal and medical professions, work in marketing and branding field or working for Federal or State government.

Linguistics is a fantastic opportunity to learn about something new and expand your knowledge. Please call the Higher ED staff at 360-716-4888 or email us at highered@tulaliptribes-nsn.gov for assistance with this exciting career opportunity.
