Tulalip Heritage Hawks welcomed the 2014-15 varsity football season with a win over Evergreen Lutheran Eagles, 56-46.

The Hawks, who added eight new players this season, battled the Eagles through fumbles, turnovers, and a few hard calls by the referees, before taking the win with a 10-point lead.

The return of tight back Robert Miles Jr., and the addition of fullback Jessie Louie, who combined to rush for 329 yards and 8 touchdowns, boosted the Hawks offense.

more than 30 years. Frank died on May 5, 2014 at the age of 83.

"I am honored and humbled to be elected chair of the NWIFC," said Loomis. "No one can ever replace Billy. It will take all of us to carry on his work."

Loomis, who was serving as vice-chair of the commission, will fill the remainder of Frank's term as chair through May, 2016. Shawn Yanity, Stillaguamish tribal chair, was elected to replace Loomis as vice chair. Ed Johnstone, Quinault Indian Nation, will continue as NWIFC treasurer.

Loomis, 72, has been Swinomish tribal fisheries manager since 1975. She has extensive experience in fisheries management throughout the region. She currently serves on the Fraser River Panel of the Pacific Salmon Commission that manages sockeye and pink salmon under the U.S./Canada Pacific Salmon Treaty. Loomis also coordinates tribal participation in the annual North of Falcon salmon season development process with the State of Washington.

"Our treaty rights are at serious risk today," Loomis said. "Salmon recovery is failing in western Washington because salmon habitat is disappearing faster than it can be restored. If there are no salmon available for harvest, our treaty rights mean nothing. We must stop this ongoing loss of habitat, but so far the trend shows no sign of improvement. We are looking to the federal government, as our trustee, to take a more active role in salmon recovery and lead a more coordinated salmon recovery effort."

The NWIFC is a support service organization for the 20 treaty Indian tribes in western Washington that are co-managers of the region's natural resources with the State of Washington. The commission provides services to tribes in areas such as fisheries management, habitat protection and fish health. The NWIFC also provides a forum for tribes to address shared natural resource management concerns and enables the tribes to speak with a unified voice.

The NWIFC is headquartered in Olympia, with satellite offices in Forks, Burlington and Kingston and employs a staff of 70.

Puget Sound Seafoods is cutting out the middlemen

Hazen Shopbell talks about his new business

By Niki Cleary

Tulalip Tribal member Hazen Shopbell started fishing when he was a kid, fished for a living as a young man and began diving in 2010. In his experience, the guy doing all the work, the fisherman, gets the short end of the stick when it comes to being paid for their work. He thinks he can help change that, which is why he started a business buying and distributing sea food.

"The idea came from when I was fishing. I'd go to the dock and we were getting ripped off on the process," said Shopbell. "When you are getting $1.80 a pound and you go to the store and they're selling it for $16 a pound, that's insulting. There's no reason we can't pay top dollar for fish. If I can pay an extra $0.30 or $0.40 a pound, I can still make a living and that goes a long way to help them [fishermen] with their gas and food."

Another point of frustration for Shopbell is the lag time between the catch and the table. He explained fish might be bought in Tulalip Bay, shipped to another area to be packed, then shipped again to stores for people to take home and cook.

"They could take our fish, and it travels for three days on ice before it's shipped and sold right here where it was caught," he exclaimed. "The second we get it, we process and vacuum seal it. Within eight hours it's ready to sell."

Since it's such a win-win, why isn't everyone doing it? Evidently fish processing is a nightmare of paperwork and details. According to the Washington State Department of Agriculture website: food processing is defined in RCW 69.07 as "the handling or processing of any food in any manner of preparation for sale for human consumption." "Food processing" includes common practices such as putting cleaned lettuce into packaged, ready to serve salad mix, or freezing blueberries in five pound plastic bags. Both of these items are prepared in advance of the sale and not eaten on site. Food processing enterprises are required to follow several WSDA regulations.

"This isn't one of those overnight successes," said Shopbell. "I started about a year and a half ago, and I've been working it every day since. Our [Tulalip's] casino wants tribal fish. The reason our casino isn't buying our fish is because they can't just buy it without going through someone legal and insured.

"The legwork behind it is insane," he continued. "You can't just sell fish, you have to go to Olympia and get a sellers license. After you buy a building, [someone from] agriculture and horticulture inspects it. You need refrigeration trucks, it's overwhelming to think about all of it."

Puget Sound Seafoods is located in Smokey Point. Shopbell said that while his company buys and sells local seafood, he has partnered with another company to provide exotic seafood in order to meet the needs of any consumer. Whether a business is looking for fresh, frozen or smoked fish, he's confident he can supply it.

"We're right here in Smokey Point so fishermen could literally drive in and drop off their fish. We have all types of salmon, Dungeness crab, shrimp, clams, pretty much any kind of seafood," he continued. "When we buy fish, half of it is filleted to eat and the other half is smoked."

Shopbell is currently working with the Tulalip Resort Casino to supply local fish for their restaurants, he is providing smoked fish for several wineries and is contracted to supply 50,000 pieces of smoked salmon for Leavenworth's Oktoberfest celebration.

Happy to see his business becoming successful, Shopbell repeated that he's not in it for the money, he wants to see small, local fishermen succeed.

"My mom was a fisherman, Peggy Sue Jones-Shopbell," he said. "I started fishing when I was five years-old with my Grandpa Lawrence Jones, I started fishing again when I was 26 and I've been doing it ever since. There's no reason we can't give top dollar for fish."

Silver, also known as Coho, salmon are currently running, the next run will be chum. Shopbell shared his favorite way to cook up his catch.

"I bake it in the oven with lemon, onions and butter, sometimes with mayonnaise, but not too much," said Shopbell. "And I usually put a bunch of fish away in my freezer. I'll take it out and eat it throughout the off-season. It's the healthiest food you can possibly get."

Puget Sound Seafoods is registered as a Native American owned business with Tulalip TERO (Tribal Employment Rights Office). You can contact Puget Sound Seafoods via phone, 425-366-1126, or email, hazenshopbell81@gmail.com.

Quil Ceda & Tulalip students receive funding from Google

Article and photo by Brandi N. Montreuil

A Quil Ceda & Tulalip Elementary teacher received exciting news on Monday, September 15, when Google announced they would be fully funding 388 classroom requests for 295 teachers in Pierce, King and Snohomish counties.

Ms. Mia Anne Cauley, who teaches fifth grade, had a project on the popular online charity site, DonorsChoose.org, which informs the public about school materials public school teachers are in need of most.

Among the projects funded by Google's $338,000 donation, teachers received materials for over 36,000 students that ranged from paper, pencils and books to laptops, musical instruments, and microscopes.

"We know how important it is for teachers to have the right tools for their work," said Darcy Nothnagle, public affairs and government relations manager of Google's Western Region in a press release Monday. "We hope that by funding these requests, teachers in our area can create the best opportunities for their students."

Cauley requested items that would help her incorporate Tulalip culture into her classroom by way of music, art and movement. She also requested e-readers and a CD player to play traditional Lushootseed language lessons and Coast Salish songs.

"My goal is to help my students see themselves in the classroom, and in the curriculum through art, music, and stories," stated Cauley on her DonorsChoose.org project page. Cauley also stated her students will be learning about environmental issues such as Celilo Falls and salmon, specifically the spawning and decline of salmon population due to the dams on the Columbia River. Other materials she requested were reading materials that explore tribal history, such as the Boldt Decision and treaty fishing rights.

"There's no better way to start off the school year than with this surprise funding for our local teachers. This generous donation to our classrooms is greatly appreciated," said Seattle Mayor Ed Murray, in a press release about the 'flash funding' by Google and who made the surprise announcement in front of teachers at Highland Park Elementary School that morning.

"We are so humbled and grateful to Google for their devotion to our teachers and students," said Charles Best, founder and CEO of DonorsChoose.org, about the event. "This is a great day for the Seattle area classrooms."

Monday's announcement also included requests from teachers at Highland Park Elementary School in Seattle, Springbrook Elementary School in Kent and Lowell Elementary in Everett.

Other similar "flash funding" campaigns funded by Google in the past months include projects in San Francisco, Atlanta, Chicago, Washington, D.C., Austin, Kansas City, and Los Angeles. According to Google, additional DonorChoose.org project funding initiatives have included $5 million AP STEM Access program, which launched over 500 new Advanced Placement courses in STEM (science, technology, engineering and math) at high poverty schools nationwide, helping to increase the number of traditionally underrepresented minority and female high school students pursue math and science in college or related careers.

Tulalip Tribes Family Services Family Night

Submitted by Michelle Fink-Custer

Taco Fiesta was the dinner theme for August Family Night at Tulalip Family Services. Our open discussions covered a wide variety of concerns for families in recovery and what a healthy relationship with a non-sober addict can be.

Chemical addiction destroys families and creates a vacuum of heart break, distrust, fear and dysfunction, just to name a few of the traumas.

Family Night is a time for community to come together for constructive support, tools for dealing with addiction and recovery of the healthy family structure.

We share the joy of a family member's recovery, struggles of not enabling our family member's addictive behaviors, the heart break of relapse, and the strides we each can make for a healthy future in our community.

One grandmother's story: my grandmother always told me to, "go to the mountain when my basket was empty." I never understood it until now. I and two of my adult children are in recovery; it has been a long journey. Today I know when life is overwhelming and I have no more to give, I only have to go to the mountains and refill my spirit (basket)".

Check out the next Family Night on the last Tuesday of the month, September 30th, 2014 at the Juanita Ann-Jones Morales Building. Please call 360-716-4400 to RSVP. Together we can make a difference!

See the vitality of the Oneida culture before assimilation

By Roger Vater, Digital Media Coordinator, Communications Dept.

During the week of Sept 29 - Oct 5 on Tulalip TV, Channel 99 on Tulalip Broadband or streaming live on www.TulalipTV.com you can watch the documentary "The Oneida Speak" at 10:30 a.m. and 10:00 p.m.

In 1935, while the country was deep in the depression, a group of Oneidas in Wisconsin took advantage of a federal writing program designed to employ Americans and offer economic relief. Many, who wrote in their own language, recorded their daily life on the farm to a federal infiltrator sent to drive people off the land to a devastating small pox epidemic.

This documentary explores the discovery of more than 800 steno books and ledgers handwritten in Oneida, the result of participation in the Works Progress Administration. The FDR program, which included jobs in the arts in addition to public works projects, allowed Oneidas to record their history in a time of great change not only in America but reservation life.

"You could say we lived in heaven, up until the time a devil came to the Oneidas," wrote Levi Baird in 1939. "He was well paid, too. A government agent worked with him. He got $2,000 for inducing and urging the Oneidas to become taxpayers... About five years after this, some of the Oneidas got behind on their taxes, and some began to lose what they had because they were not accustomed to paying taxes. It has always been so that if anything comes up, it always ends in a loss for the Oneidas."

You can watch "The Oneida Speak" and many other Native programs on Tulalip TV, Channel 99 on Tulalip Broadband or streaming live on www.TulalipTV.com on a PC, Mac or any 'Smart' device such as phone or tablet.

Ready camera one

A rare behind the scenes look at how Tulalip TV covers Heritage High School sports

Article and photos by Brandi N. Montreuil

Heritage football and volleyball seasons are officially in full swing and if you have ever attended a home game, you've seen the Tulalip TV crew on the sidelines chasing down the action with their super-sized cameras. Or perhaps you have sat back at home and watched the action live on your TV or laptop, unaware of the commotion going on behind the scenes, such as the amount of prep time involved to cover not just one game, but a whole season or two simultaneously. See-Yaht-Sub recently sat down with Brian Berry, Director of Video for Tulalip TV to get the scoop on what it takes to bring live sports coverage to the Tulalip community.

SYS: When do you begin to prepare for the football and volleyball season?

Berry: Prep for sports begin a couple months prior to the first game. Preproduction usually starts with projected budgets for the season. Each year budgets get tighter and we have to look at how that affects our coverage. Due to the success of both the Heritage boys and girls basketball teams this last season, a healthy percentage of our production budget went to covering their games at the State Championships. We anticipated budget shortfalls for this seasons' football and volleyball coverage and had to make some adjustments. Each season we strive to make our coverage better than the previous one, but this year we may have met our match. We are still implementing new strategies that add something a little different, and hopefully exciting, to the coverage.

SYS: How many cameras does it take to cover a football or volleyball game live?

Berry: The answer to this question is different this year than it would have been last year. This is one of the positions affected by budget cuts. Last year we implemented four cameras with operators for football and three for volleyball. We still have four cameras pointed at the field for football, but one of them is now a GoPro mounted on a painter's pole that I brought from home. It gives an ultra-wide unique look at the field, but it's nowhere near as versatile as a camera and operator are.

For now, we set-up two cameras in the visitors' stands, one camera shoots wide and the other close-up. The third camera roams wirelessly along the visitors' sideline. For volleyball, we set one camera on the bleachers at the net for a wide shot and two cameras on the floor to cover the close-up action. Who knows, a GoPro camera might show up there too.

One of the goals that we set each year is to hopefully allow the viewer experience at home to appear that we have many more cameras. They work in concert so that the viewer doesn't even consciously notice that we are switching between multiple cameras.

SYS: You work out of a white van, do you think of it as a command center?

Berry: I don't necessarily think of the van as a command center, although that's probably not a bad description. I think of it as a place that I get to spend a few months a year in and cover sports. It runs the gambit from really hot inside to freezing cold. To me, setting up and striking (taking all the gear and packing it up after a production) in the rain allows for the most challenges. A lot of electronics and water can be a punishing combination.

SYS: What kind of van is it, and how do you outfit it to cover a game live?

Berry: It is a big Econovan! It drives like a big Econovan and it is about as plain as they come, but it is my office, on and off, for roughly six months.

We stuff a lot of electronics and people in that van. Four people in a van that size is normally not a big deal, but add half a ton of equipment and it gets small quickly.

SYS: Why use more than a dozen monitors, why so many?

Berry: That's a great question! As the director, I need to be able to see what each camera sees. Additionally it helps to see replay, which takes two more monitors, and a monitor that shows what is going to air. Additional monitors show graphics and give me a preview of what might be going out live next. Basically, I can take a look at it before the viewer sees it to ensure things look right. We are watching the game just like the viewer; however, I get to see more views and then the fun starts of deciding which camera should go on air next. "Ready camera 1, Take camera 1. Ready camera 3, take camera 3 and so on.

SYS: How many are on your crew?

Berry: There are seven and sometimes eight crewmembers on location and one back at Tulalip TV, at the Tulalip Administration Building.

SYS: How long has Tulalip Communications covered Heritage games via televised broadcast?

Berry: We are moving into our 11th season of covering Heritage sports. It started with basketball back in January of 2005, which was the 04-05 season.

SYS: What can viewers expect this season in coverage?

Berry: You'll have to watch and see!

SYS: We discussed some changes made this season due to budget concerns, but can you explain how they impact viewers?

Berry: One of the more noticeable cutbacks will be noticed in the absence of announcers. You will still hear the Public Address announcers but not our own Tulalip TV announcers. This cutback also allows the crew to operate without an audio operator/engineer and that is an additional cost savings.

SYS: What type of cameras do you use?

Berry: We shoot the events with high definition (HD) camera, but they are set to standard definition (SD) since Tulalip TV broadcasts in SD. It is our hope to transition to an HD broadcast at Tulalip TV in 2015.

SYS: Why do you only cover Heritage home games?

Berry: We only cover home games due to limited resources; this is staff and budget combined.

SYS: What is Tulalip TV's ultimate goal for sports coverage this year?

Berry: It is our hope to share the games with viewers that can't otherwise attend. We hope people come out to the games and support the teams, players and school in person, but that's not always possible. Hopefully they can still enjoy the experience on TV.

Every year, we are asked to increase our coverage and expand to other schools, but again it has a lot to do with financial limitations. Heritage High School has the highest concentration of Tulalip youth in a single place, as well as the fact that the Tulalip Tribes invests funds to support the Heritage Sports program. We have limited staff and while we would love to cover all youth who are achieving, we do not have the resources to do so. We've floated ideas about how to choose a game of the week or player of the week, or even youth extracurricular activity of the week, but coverage of Heritage sports keeps getting the support of upper management and the community.

SYS: What is the most challenging thing about sports coverage?

Berry: It takes a lot of behind the scenes work to get a game on the air and prepared for on-demand playback at www.tulaliptv.com, but we have a great team and we take pride in making it appear nearly seamless.

SYS: How do you keep it fun?

Berry: I am not sure I do! The kids are the ones that make it fun.

We must give praise to those who have accomplished overcoming addiction

Sometimes, human beings remember we shelter the positive accomplishments that people work hard for and only reflect on the negative things to the eye of which addiction has caused. I'd like to take this time to say that I am proud of those families, who have reunited with their children. Who have gone through all the steps and hoops to return your children home to a loving and healthy family. It is important that we as a no one is perfect. We are humans who make mistakes and learn from them. We must give praise to those who have accomplished overcoming addiction. Some have received jobs, certificates, and/or have returned their children home. I just want you to know that you are noticed in the community and that only bigger rewards are to come.

LaDonna Louise Fryberg Williams

Submitted by Sara Pattison

It's a girl! LaDonna Louise Fryberg Williams was born July 17, 2014 at 8:01 a.m. to Lris J. Fryberg and John K. Williams, Sr. She weighed 7 pounds.

Her grandparents are Dean and the late LaDonna Fryberg and Sherman and Marilyn Williams. Her great-grandparents are Josephine and Martin Fryberg and the late Sherman and Arlene Williams.

Happy 75th birthday, Donald "Penoke" Hatch

Former Mayor of Marysville Dennis Kendall and his wife Sue, who is a retired secretary for Marysville School District office, Leon Strom of Yakama, bishop of the Shaker Church and former hardball teammate for many years, as well as many, many other family and friends in attendance.

They all had wonderful words and very crazy stories to tell and roast my father with, and had everyone in tears of laughter especially Leon S.

Karen Fryberg stated prices of items of when my dad was born back in 19, like stamps being only 3 cents and the price of bread and gas.

Our Aunt Pam Jackson brought a lot of memories out of the courtship of my father and my late mother, as he would go to Muckleshoot to visit her at dances and dinners, sneaking out to go see my mother at times, now that was love. It all paid off for my father and mother, they married and had 5 children, and until our dear mother passed, they were married for 45 years.

My dad was blessed to have honor and blessing songs sang to him by our young little cousin Toby Maltos and our upper Tulalip family from Swinomish, the Cayou/Cladoosby family. This picked up my dad's spirits and I can't thank you all enough for all the drumming and singing that day.

The best gift he received on this day was when he saw our elder of our family, Jane Wright, coming into the room and giving a birthday speech to our dad and guest. This was the upmost wonderful gift he could ask for, you see she has been sick so he didn't think she would be able to attend, but thanks to our two cousins Debbie Peterson and Illa Wright for getting her there to Sunday Sept 7th family and friends gathered to celebrate Donald "Penoke" Hatch's 75th birthday.

In attendance there were many delegates past and present from other neighboring tribes, the Chairman of the Swinomish Tribe Brian Cladoosby, Sophie Bailey and Kevin Paul, both senators. Quileute former council member Wally Jackson, David Bean present council member and former members of Puyallup, Nancy McCloud-Shipentower, as well as our own present and former Chairmen, Herman Williams, Sr, and Mel Sheldon.

surprise my dad. He could not have asked for anything more.

My dad was very surprised and appreciative of all that were in attendance. I would like to thank everyone that was there as well and helped celebrate my dad's 75th birthday and made it a memorable day as well as brightening up his spirits.

A big thank you to all that helped me make this possible, Karen Fryberg for making the wonderful 3 tear chocolate cake, my children Danika and Nate Hatch, my niece Diana Aguilar, my Brother Donald and nephew Deion and Rocio Hatch for the donations.

Thanks to Danelle Gomez for making her famous strawberry jello cakes and huge thanks to Lahneen Fryberg and her family for cooking the great meal!

Thank you to Rosmary Boggess, a good family friend that's always there for me and my family, (our elementary school nurse of many years and honorary tribal member), for helping me out.

If I left anyone out I apologize.

My dad would also like to thank everyone for all the wonderful gifts he received, like the carved paddle, carvings and paintings and yes, Seahawk hat and gear!

Again I want to thank all that attended and for all the phone calls he received on his birthday. My dad means the world to me, like I said on this day, he is my teacher and has taught me a lot in my life time and I can't thank him enough for all he has done, not just me, but for the rest of my family and our Tulalip community and other reservations around us.

Thank you, Tulalip and Yakima Tribes for arrangements for our beloved mother, wife, grandmother

Hello, my name is Stephanie J.C. Fryberg.

I am writing this letter on the behalf of my dad, Dean R. Fryberg Sr.; brother, Robert B. Fryberg; sister; Loris J. Fryberg; myself, Stephanie J.C. Fryberg, and kids. We would just like to say, "Thank you" to the Tulalip Tribes and The Yakima Tribe for taking care of the Schaeffer Shipman Funeral Home services and arrangements for our Beloved Mother/

Wife/Grandmother, LaDonna Louise Fryberg.

We appreciate everything that was done that needed to be done and all the help and support that was given to us and the family during one of the hardest times in our lives.

We'd also like to say thank you to the speakers, they said all the words we would have wanted to say ourselves, but just could not find the words to. The cooks that provided the food, thank you all for the meals you provided for us. The food was great. Dwight Casady also says to tell the cooks he said, "Thank ya'll and much appreciation for sending him back with a car full of "REAL" food!"

And for those of you that were there helping and supporting our family that I did not mention in here - thank you all - much appreciation goes out to all of you.

Letter to the editor

This is in response to Greg Young's response [letter in the Heald, 9/14/14] to the Tulalip Tribes authority regarding taxes on lands within the Tulalip Reservation.

The taxes referred to which have been taxed by Snohomish County are for buildings located on land that lies within Quil Ceda Village located on the Tulalip Indian Reservation and said land in question are owned solely by The Tulalip Tribes in trust status.

Lands within the Tulalip Reservation that are held in Trust Status for individual Indians or the Tribe are held in Trust by the United States Government in trust for the Individual Indians or Tribes and are not subject to taxation. A majority of the Tulalip Reservation over the years has lost this trust status when it was sold to non-Indians and in that case the County can collect taxes.

The United States Government must treat Tribes as governments under the treaties they entered into with the Tribes in the 1800's requires the USA under the treaties to treat Tribes as their own Governments.

I suggest Mr. Young read the treaties the United States entered into with the Tribes and do a research on the history of the Treaties the United States entered into with the Tribes and if he disagrees with the treaty language then he should refrain from doing any business with establishments located on lands that are owned by the individual Indians or the Tribes.

I hope this will explain the status of lands located with tribal reservations as it is a mixed land ownership, where individual Indians may own land in trust, Tribes own land in trust and lands that have been sold to non-tribal individuals or business are no longer held in trust and are subject to taxation.

Virginia Carpenter,
Tulalip Tribal Member

Letter of resignation

Herman Williams, Chairman, Tulalip Board of Directors, September 11, 2014

It is with deep regret that I am turning in my resignation as a Tulalip Gaming Commissioner due to family problems. As you know I am the primary caregiver for my spouse who has a non-curable health problem.

I have truly enjoyed my time with TGA, as the Tribe under the Federal Indian Gaming Act are required to approve their own gaming regulations in accordance with IGRA guidelines. In 1992 or 1993, LeRoy Fryberg, Sr. And I worked for a full year with the tribal attorneys in putting together the regulations that were in the original tribal Gaming Ordinance 55 that was approved by the BOD and Federal Government. We received no compensation as we did this voluntarily. Ordinance 55 was adopted by the Board and approved by the Federal Government. I still have my original Commissioner TGA badge issued 6/28/1993 signed by the Tribal Chairman, Staley G. Jones, Sr. I have had the privilege of being elected on the Gaming Commission since the Ordinance was adopted.

It is with great regret that it has come time for me to step down as my family comes first and foremost; however my heart is with TGA, as the Commissioners and staff have been truly dedicated to insure that all of the regulations, Tribal, State and Federal regulations are followed and they are the backbone in insuring that the gaming regulation under IGRA, State, and tribal are followed. They have kept our gaming operations in compliance with all of the regulations. My hands go up to the TGA staff as they do a tremendous job in seeing that we follow all of the numerous regulations to keep our Tribe in compliance and have made us one of the best tribal regulated gaming operations in the entire United States. Also we the Commission has made it a priority to insure that a Tribal Member is the Director of TGA. Thanks for Tom Gobin, Lena Hammons and our current Director, Lance Ledford, they have kept our gaming establishments in compliance with all of the regulations.

I wish to thank all of the Tribal members that voted for me as a Gaming Commissioner as they put their trust in me to insure that our gaming facilities were operating according to the numerous laws and regulations.

I do not want any type of recognition or going away party for my time as Gaming Commissioner, as it has been an honor and privilege to serve my Tribe in this capacity.

Thank you, Virginia Carpenter Chairman,
Tulalip Gaming Commissioner

Thank you, Mark Newland and students

A special thank you to the teacher, Mark Newland and students at carpenter's training school for their assistance with prep and painting at the housing building. It's a great class to start in the construction field for those that sign up and attend, your help is very much appreciated, turn around time was a factor to use the students and with Mr. Newland's help and understanding.

Sincerely, Mr. Avel Medina, Sr., (Bldg. Maint. Carpenter)
