Tulalip Tribes Vision

We gathered at Tulalip are one people.
We govern ourselves.
We will arrive at a time when each and every person has become most capable.
Together we create a healthy and culturally vibrant community

Tulalip Tribes Mission

We make available training, teaching and advice, both spiritual and practical.

Tulalip Tribes Values

1. We respect the community of our elders past and present, and pay attention to their good words.
2. We uphold and follow the teachings that come from our ancestors.
3. It is valued work to uphold and serve our people.
4. We work hard and always do our best.
5. We show respect to every individual.
6. We strengthen our people so that they may walk a good walk.
7. We do not gossip, we speak the truth.

Tulalip Tribes and Quil Ceda Village defend right to tax tribal economic development

Tulalip Tribes Public Affairs

Tulalip, WA--June 12, 2015--The Tulalip Tribes and its political subdivision, the Consolidated Borough of Quil Ceda Village, filed suit today in the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Washington asking the Court to permanently enjoin the State of Washington and Snohomish County from imposing and enforcing sales and use, business and occupation, and personal property tax on economic activities within the boundaries of the Quil Ceda Village, to the extent of similar taxes imposed by Tulalip.

“With its own resources, the Tulalip Tribes transformed over 2,000 acres of vacant land into Quil Ceda Village, one of the premier shopping and entertainment destinations in Western Washington,” said Mel Sheldon, chairman of the Tulalip Tribes. “Today, Quil Ceda Village has over 150 businesses, creating more than 6,000 jobs, attracting up to 60,000 visitors a day, and contributing hundreds of millions of dollars to the North Snohomish County economy.”

Information from the Washington Department of Revenue reveals that Quil Ceda Village generates approximately $40 million in tax revenues each year, but none of these taxes go to Tulalip or the Village. Instead, the state and county collect one hundred percent of the taxes, with the vast majority going to Olympia. “This is a grave injustice,” continued Sheldon. “Like any government, Tulalip must generate tax revenues to fund the infrastructure and local government services it provides, which benefit not just Village businesses and patrons, but everyone in Snohomish County.”

“As a matter of federal law,” said Sheldon “Tulalip is entitled to collect its own Tribal taxes on business activities in Quil Ceda Village and Tulalip will defend its right to function as a sovereign government.” Tulalip cannot do this as long as the state and county continue to impose and enforce their taxes because businesses and customers in the Village would be subject to dual taxation. The United States has long recognized that tribal taxing authority is an important aspect of tribal sovereignty and self-governance.

For well over a decade the Tulalip Tribes has requested to work together with both state and county officials to reach a fair resolution on this issue, but these requests have been ignored. “It is critical for the continued growth of the Village that we take action now,” said Chairman Sheldon.

Tiny houses builders celebrate graduation

As summer approaches, students everywhere are graduating from school, or moving up a grade. On June 15, thirteen students from the Tulalip Tribes' Construction Training Program graduated a 10-week course. A graduation ceremony was held at the Hibulb Cultural Center to mark the event.

The Tulalip Tribal Employment Rights Office partnered with Edmonds Community College to offer a trades program to students, providing curriculum that teaches a variety of construction trades and skills. This program gives students better opportunities for full-time employment and skills that will last a lifetime. Upon completion of the course students are certified in the basics of construction trade, awarded a flagging certification, First Aid/CPR, and an OSHA 10 Hour Safety Card.

Under the supervision of instructors Mark Newland and William “Billy” Burchett students constructed two tiny houses for their final class project. These houses are approximately 120-square-foot and offer stability and a safer environment for residents of Nickelsville, a homeless encampment located in Seattle where the houses are being donated.

The insulated houses will offer electricity and heat, along with a Native American touch. Tulalip tribal members James Madison and Ty Juvinel designed the doors of the houses.

John Hord, Nickelsville resident, spoke at the graduation about the impact these homes will have on people now and in the future and wants, “all to understand that it’s not a short-term gift. The lifespan will be touching lives 15-20 years from now.”

Hord was pursuing his bachelor’s degree in psychology, human services and urban environmental issues and working in construction before being displaced from his home a few months ago. Hord plans on returning to school and combining his education and construction skills to mentor other Native Americans on his reservation, White Earth, in Minnesota.

The TVTC graduates received a diploma and ceremonial hammer. Congratulations to Matt Charles, Stuart Charette, Arron Charley, William Duran, Philip Falcon, Corey Fryberg, Jess Fryberg, John Primeau, Abrahn Ramos, Maurice Riley, Cole Stanger, Darwin Weaselhead and Sky Weaselhead.

Third graders present cultural fair highlighting STI curriculum

Article and photos by Brandi N. Montreuil

In the midst of summer excitement, third graders from Quil Ceda Tulalip Elementary School presented the last project of the school year to their peers, which incorporated the Since Time Immemorial curriculum. On Thursday, June 11, third graders hosted a mini cultural fair where they presented information on seven tribes they had been studying. The cultural fair is an example of the unique learning environment cultivated at the school, which serves a large population of Native students in the Marysville School District.

The school's cultural specialist, Chelsea Craig, worked with students on a six-week project in which they chose a tribe to study and then presented what they learned about the tribe. Chosen for study were the Muckleshoot, Nooksack, Tulalip, Spokane, Suquamish and Yakama Tribes, along with the Afognak village located in Alaska.

As part of the project the students were asked to contact their chosen tribe to learn first-hand about the tribe's history and culture. Many of the students received letters of support for the project containing information about treaty rights, economic development and tribal history. One tribe even provided a DVD for students to watch.

Jimmy Faria chose to study Nooksack. Before the project he knew nothing about the tribe of 2,000 members. "I wrote to them and they actually wrote me back. You will learn a lot about tribes here. I learned the difference between how a coastal tribe builds a house and how a plains tribes build a house," said Jimmy, who handed out brochures on Nooksack he created using the program Publisher.

The project is a great example of how STI works in schools. The curriculum helps address the need for Native representation in class lessons. It provides a basic framework of Indian history and understanding of sovereignty for grades k-12. Lessons can be adapted to focus on tribal history and culture, such as Mrs. Deveraux's class which completed a writing assignment that focused on canoes. Students learned how canoes were made, cared for, and their importance to Coast Salish tribes. Tribal components can be added to each learning subject. For example math students can learn the dimensions of different Coast Salish canoe styles, students can read about tribes using canoes for transportation, and art assignments can include designing mock canoes, as tribal carvers do. This is how STI works.

"They were so thrilled to write to the tribes and wait for a response," said Craig, "A lot of these students are learning about tribes for the first time while others are learning more about their own tribes. This work is about empowering them. It really is amazing to see how passionate they are about learning this stuff."

For more information about STI please visit the website www.indian-ed.org.

Article and photos by Micheal Rios

On Friday, June 12, 2015 the Orca Ballroom located in the Tulip Resort Casino was home to the Graduation Banquet held for the Tulip tribal member graduating class of 2015. In all there were fifty-four high school graduates and twenty-seven higher education graduates who, accompanied by their friends and families, convened for an evening to commemorate the rite of passage with entertainment, a catered three course dinner, and motivational speeches that reminded the graduates this is just the first step in the path to success.

A special recognition ceremony to honor the senior Tulip Tribes male and female student of the year was also held. Jasmyne Losik received the female student of the year honors. Drew Hatch, who made the All-State team for his stellar athletic performance in both football and wrestling at Marysville-Pilchuck High School, received the male student of the of year award. Drew will be attending Oregon State University in the fall in pursuit of a business management degree. Additionally, Drew will be playing D1 collegiate football for the Beavers as an outside linebacker.

Congratulations to all those Tulalip Tribal students who put in the hard work and dedication to earn their graduate status. Chasing a dream requires your efforts and passion. The hard work isn't over now that you have graduated, it's only the beginning as you now prepare for the new challenges waiting in the next chapter of life. Good luck and congratulations!

Rashad Norris, keynote speaker for the evening.

2015 Salmon Ceremony

Article and photos by Mara Hill

The Salmon Ceremony is a reflection of the importance of culture and tradition to the Snohomish people known as Tulalip. The salmon ceremony, which origins date back hundreds of years, was renewed around 1976-1977 by our tribal members and elders. The ceremony is a spiritual event, a way to continue tradition and also a way to show thanks and bless the new fishing season.

Tribal members gathered at the shore of Tulalip Bay on June 13 to welcome King Salmon through singing, drumming and dancing. After a community feast and prayer, King Salmon is returned to the waters to share with his people his visit with the Tulalip people.

This year's Salmon Ceremony was dedicated to Teri Jones Gobin and Patti Gobin for their participation each year since the revival of the Salmon Ceremony to keep the ceremony alive not only for us, but for future generations to come.

Indigenous Futures: Indian Heritage Murals

By Micheal Rios, photos courtesy Andrew Morrison.

Recently, the Seattle Art Museum presented PechaKucha Seattle volume 63, titled Indigenous Futures. PechaKuchas are informal and fun gatherings where creative people get together and present their ideas, works, thoughts – just about anything, really – in fun, relaxed spaces that foster an environment of learning and understanding. It would be easy to think PechaKuchas are all about the presenters and their presentation, but there is something deeper and a more important subtext to each of these events. They are all about togetherness, about coming together as a community to reveal and celebrate the richness and dimension contained within each one of us. They are about fostering a community through encouragement, friendship and celebration.

The origins of PechaKucha Nights stem from Tokyo, Japan and have since gone global; they are now happening in over 700 cities around the world. What made PechaKucha Night Seattle volume 63 so special was that it was comprised of all Native artists, writers, producers, performers, and activists presenting on their areas of expertise and exploring the realm of Native ingenuity in all its forms, hence the name Indigenous Futures.

Andrew Morrison, San Carlos Apache and Haida, is a phenomenal painter and muralist who is proud to call Seattle his home, he is a great 12th Man Seahawks fan, and considers a blank wall his absolute greatest resource. Morrison's PechaKucha presentation was on the past, present, and future of the great Indian Heritage High School murals he created of Chief Sealth, Chief Joseph, Geronimo, and Chief Sitting Bull.

"Being a Native person, I really take a lot of pride in painting and creating murals. It truly is an honor every day to be able to celebrate the Native American arts through my craft," says Morrison. "The goal of my painting is to better myself, my family and the community."

Morrison and many of his friends attended Indian Heritage High School (IHS) in Seattle. In 2001, after attending college, Morrison began volunteering in the art program and noticed there was a void within the school. "I saw there wasn't a lot of artwork on the walls of the school. The walls were very blank and very dormant, without energy. As a muralist, as a painter, I'm always striving for larger surfaces," explained Morrison of his motivation to begin painting 25-foot by 100-foot large murals of Native American heroes.

It was a twelve-year project to completely finish the four mammoth murals on IHS, beginning in 2001 and being completed in 2013. The massive portraits of Native American heroes was noticed by news outlets, tribal and non-tribal alike. The portraits are a source of pride for many Native people who don't see their heroes recognized as they should be. Unfortunately, there were those who saw the massive portraits as an opportunity to vandalize another's work to showcase their own ignorance, as the mantra goes, 'haters gonna hate'. Over the weekend of February 24, 2015 a local graffiti crew desecrated the murals by splattering white latex paint all over them.

Only days later a cleanup operation, led by Morrison, consisting of 30-35 volunteers worked tirelessly to remove the white spray-paint and restore the murals to their former glory. As if the vandals' desecrations wasn't enough, soon after restoring the murals Morrison learned there was a proposal in the Seattle School District to demolish Indian Heritage High School, along with his murals.

"I fought and advocated for a year straight, twelve months exactly, to preserve these murals. I felt these images of our Native American warrior chiefs were so sacred and so holy that to demolish them to the ground would be another form of desecration. That was a very tumultuous battle and fight, but I give the credit to the community and the people who believe in art and believe in our indigenous culture. Through the power of togetherness we were able to get the Seattle School District to vote to preserve these murals. Now, these murals are presented prepped and ready to go as they will be built into the new Wilson Pacific Schools to be opened next year.

"Especially after living through experiences like these, it actually inspires me to paint bigger and larger and be more creative and go more in depth. It is heartwarming to know that the murals will continue to witness life and be an inspiration at the new Wilson Pacific Schools."

BOOM CITY

OPEN FOR FIREWORKS SEASON

Article and photos by Brandi N. Montreuil

Fireworks stands and distributors have taken up temporary residence in the lot behind the Tulalip Resort Casino, which means that fireworks season is upon us and Boom City is officially open for business.

This season boasts 139 fireworks stands, 11 concession stands and 3 arts and crafts vendors. That is 12 more firework stands than last year.

Despite the recent debate on a firework ban in neighboring Marysville, stand owners expect a bountiful season. Many stand owners are fully stocked and ready to barter prices on the first day.

According to Washington state law it is illegal to discharge illegal fireworks, however, this does not include the reservation, which is subject to Tulalip and federal firework laws. This allows stand owners to sell fireworks prohibited by Washington state laws. To compensate buyers, Boom City provides a lighting area where fireworks banned off-reservation can be discharged in safety.

In Marysville residents are limited to discharging legal fireworks on July 4 from 9 a.m. to 11:00 p.m. only.

Safety is top priority for the Boom City Committee which is responsible for the organization and compliance of stand owners. To ensure safety of stand owners and visitors, security personnel are on-site throughout the selling season. Tulalip Police Department also maintains an active presence with K9 units and foot patrols to discourage illegal activity.

Boom City will close late evening on July 4. Hours of operation are 6:00 a.m. to midnight. The lighting area is open all hours of operation except when a memorial show or demo show is scheduled.

For more information please visit the Boom City Facebook Page.

Right: Jared Parks co-owner of 'Crazy Deals vs High Times' plans to amp up his fireworks season by including technology to market his products.

Complex Trauma: Facts for Caregivers

Submitted by legacy of healing, child advocacy center; Source: The National Child Traumatic Stress Network, www.NCTSN.org

This fact sheet presents information that can help you recognize the signs and symptoms of complex trauma in your child and offers recommendations for what you can do to help your child heal.

Complex trauma describes both children's exposure to multiple traumatic events and the wide-ranging, long-term impact of this exposure. These events are severe, pervasive and often interpersonal, such as abuse or profound neglect. They usually begin early in life, may disrupt many aspects of the child's development, and interfere with the child's ability to form secure attachment bonds. Many aspects of a child's healthy physical and mental development rely on this primary source of safety and stability.

What is it like to be a child with complex trauma?

We all have an internal alarm system to warn us of danger and prepare us to respond. The "fight, flight, or freeze" response prepares us to fight off an attack, flee if fighting does not seem possible, or freeze if we can neither fight nor flee. This response is something that has been built into the human body and brain for thousands of years. When we perceive danger, this internal alarm system turns on, and when the danger passes, the alarm system shuts down.

Children with complex trauma often have overactive alarm systems, where their alarm system "goes haywire." These children may jump at any loud noise, or feel their hearts pounding when they see one child shove another on the playground. They might wake up from sleep every time a dog barks in the neighborhood. They are always on the lookout for danger. Often they think safe situations are dangerous. They have false alarms when things remind them of the traumatic events. We call these "trauma reminders."

What are reactions to reminders?

Trauma reminders make a child think about or "relive" a frightening event from the past. Trauma reminders (some people may call these "triggers") can be places, sounds, smells, tastes, colors, textures, words, feelings, and even other people. Children can have trauma reminders many times a day. They can be reminded of traumas that happened even before they could understand or talk about them.

A child may react to a trauma reminder without being aware of the reminder. Parents and caregivers may not be aware of them either. Here are some common trauma reminders for children with complex trauma:

- Ketchup—reminds a child of the blood she saw when her father hit her brother
- A book dropping off a desk—reminds a child of gunshots in his neighborhood
- Packing suitcases—reminds a child of the day he was taken from his mother's home and placed in foster care
- Arguing—takes a child back to seeing her father beat her mother
- Feeling alone and overwhelmed—reminds a child of how she felt while being sexually abused

How might the complex trauma affect the way my child sees the world?

Complex trauma changes how a child views the world and connects with other people. Some children with a complex trauma history may do the following:

- Believe that the world is and will always be an unsafe place
- Have trouble depending on a caregiver or other adults, such as teachers or police officers, to keep them safe
- Have trouble building and maintaining healthy relationships with others; approach relationships with suspicion and distrust
- Overreact or feel completely betrayed by a minor misunderstanding or squabble with a friend
- Respond negatively to seemingly positive events, such as praise, intimacy, or feelings of peace. A child who lacks experience of and memory for happy and safe times may not understand or be comfortable with such feelings.

How does complex trauma change my child's thinking?

A child with a complex trauma history may:

- Have trouble developing skills and learning, due to the amount of mental energy being spent reacting to trauma reminders
- Have trouble focusing, organizing, and processing information; this might make the child seem to be ignoring a caregiver or teacher who has to repeat requests or instructions to get a response
- Seem distracted because he is trying to predict or avoid the next "bad thing" that will happen
- Seem very nervous, emotionally intense, or to have a "hair-trigger" response; frequently, she may be flooded by overwhelming and unbearable emotions
- Seem "shut down," numb, and unable to experience or express any emotions

Part of taking care of your child is taking care of yourself first

- Be aware of your own feelings and reactions. How you are coping affects how you are able to help your child. Children often take their cues about how to react from the important adults around them, using the adult as a model for their own feelings and behaviors. If you are sad or upset in front of your child, that's okay. Show your child, through words and actions that, even when you're upset, you are still able to manage your feelings and to take care of him/her.

- Take care of yourself as best you can, and accept help from those around you. Taking care of yourself is an important part of taking care of your child. Try to get enough rest and exercise, and take some time away from your childcare responsibilities.
- Keep other family members and important adults (such as early child care and pre-school providers, teachers, coaches, clergy, and youth leaders) informed of what your child is experiencing. Partner with them to support your child by helping them to understand the connection between traumas and your child's feelings and behaviors.
- Do not hesitate to seek professional support. Parents and caregivers sometimes feel as though they should handle everything on their own. Experiencing repeated traumas can be extraordinarily painful, even overwhelming, and doesn't necessarily get better on its own. It makes sense to seek the advice, guidance, and support of someone who knows about trauma and can help you and your child.

What else can I do to help my child heal from complex trauma?

- Keep to a daily routine, as much as you can, so she knows what to expect. Children are reassured and comforted when things are predictable and familiar.
- Listen to his words and watch his behaviors. While some children can tell you what they're experiencing, others won't want to talk about it, won't know what they are feeling, or can't express it in words. "Listen" to what your child is showing and telling you in words, behaviors, or physical complaints like headache or stomachache.
- Praise your child for making good choices, cooperating, and handling things well.
- Set reasonable and consistent limits and give clear expectations. Holding children accountable, especially children who have experienced traumas, helps them feel in control and successful.
- Use simple language and watch your child's reaction, when explaining what has happened. Follow your child's cues as to how much to say. Don't get frustrated if she asks you to tell it again. Older children may get quiet and seem not to want to discuss things, even though they want to know.

- Reassure your child when you leave him, in clear cut ways, and let him know when you will be back together. After an incident where your child has reacted to a trauma reminder or other upset, he might be clingier, have trouble separating, or be more fearful. If you tell your child, for example, “I will pick you up right after school,” do your best to stick to that. (And it’s best to be honest, rather than tell him what he wants to hear.)
- Watch for trauma-related reminders or “triggers” that are hard for your child. If she gets overly upset or angry when seeing people who hurt or neglected her or when overhearing adults talk about what happened, she may need to learn how to cope with painful events or im-
- ages.
- “Respond” to your child rather than “react.” Children often act out when faced with stressful situations. What seems like a tantrum or a rude demand may be a reaction to a trauma reminder. Before you jump in and punish, Think trauma first. Take some time to explore and understand the roots of the behavior.
- Advocate for your child within the school system, discuss what the school can do to support her (e.g., understanding potential trauma reminders or triggers such as fire alarms, offering counseling or accommodations, etc.).
- Keep an eye out, as your child gets older, for new situations that stir up trauma reactions. Be prepared for your child to “revisit” the traumas and, if you need to, seek professional support.

Notice to Tulalip Tribes Guardians

Submitted by Wendy Church, Court Director, Tulalip Tribal Court

It has always been the Tulalip Tribes position that we should protect and cultivate the best future for our children in the Tulalip Tribal community. There is now a new Juvenile and Family Code aimed towards that goal. It fosters a family-centered approach which places family as the primary source for understanding the needs and challenges of the child.

The Court would like all Guardians to be informed that pursuant to the new Code there are some changes that they need to be made aware:

- beda?chelh Guardianship Team: beda?chelh has created a guardianship division which will create rules and procedures for reviewing guardianship cases no less than semi-annually for a period of three years. If any concerns are noted by the guardianship review team, the review period may be extended past three years.

- Annual Guardianship Reviews: No further Annual Guardianship Reviews will be required once a guardianship is granted unless there is a change of circumstances or a request for Court review is made by the beda?chelh guardianship team. The Court and beda?chelh retain jurisdiction until the child turns 18, marries, is emancipated or adopted.
- Letters of Guardianship: Except new Letters of Guardianship which will be issued by the Court beginning on June 1, 2015. These letters will no longer expire annually but will continue until the child reaches the age of 18, marries, is emancipated or adopted. It is the goal of the Court to have all new Letters issued by December 31, 2015. If you have not received new Letters and they have expired you may call the Court and ask that a Clerk issue new Letters. The Court has many new Letters to issue; please do not call for new Letters if your current Letters are still in place. We will be working diligently to get all Guardians their new Letters in a timely manner.

- Moving: Guardians should notify beda?chelh, the Court and Tribal enrollment forty-five days prior to moving beyond 60 miles from the Reservation, of the new address, the reason for the move and the plan the guardian has in place for maintaining the child with his or her family and culture. If the family fails to notify beda?chelh, a hearing may be set to determine whether the child should be allowed to move with the guardian or be returned to beda?chelh. A “Notice of Moving” form can be requested from the Court should it be necessary to notify beda?chelh and the Court.
- Contact information: The Court is requiring all Guardians to submit a verification of address form so that the Court will have your most up-to date information. It has always been a Guardians duty to keep the Court informed of their current contact information. Please find the ‘Address Verification’ form attached. Even if you think the Court has your current information, please return the form as soon as possible so it can be placed in your file.

The Tulalip Tribes appreciates your commitment to our children by accepting the responsibilities of being a guardian. If you have specific questions regarding your duties or rights as a guardian, you should consult an attorney. If you have questions regarding the new Guardianship procedures please call the Court at (360) 716-4773 or see the new Juvenile and Family Code online at <http://www.codepublishing.com/wa/Tulalip/>. Thank you again for keeping the promise we all made to the children that they would have a safe, stable, and supportive home.

We are a community

We are a community, an extended family bound by shared history. All are equal on this plain regardless of title association or grade level completed, whether your pursuits are familial, monetary, physical, metaphysical or existential. We're all in the same boat. If we can't maintain balance and diversity we all risk going overboard.

Would true leaders, despite their accumulated wealth and executive salaries, find it necessary to compete with tribal fishermen over limited resources relied upon to feed families? All while seated in positions of authority sufficient to influence regulations in their favor. I'm sure it's all perfectly legal; still it reeks of greed and opportunity.

Does their grandstanding know no bounds? When every funeral and community event is a well-paid photo op, is anything sacred?

Isn't it enough of a challenge mismanaging a failing state?
