

War Canoe Races expand to 3-day event

By Micheal Rios

Last August, the Tulalip Tribes revived war canoe races and in doing so brought back what used to be an annual event on our waters before a very sudden and lengthy hibernation canoe races, the cultural event returned to our period. Through the efforts and perseverance of several tribal members dedicated to reviving the practice of hosting and competing in war reservation, along with the prestige that comes from being a tribe included in the war canoe races circuit.

Tulalip Tribes, Snohomish County work to reduce reservation land use conflicts

By Kalvin Valdillez

Across Native America Indigenous peoples were forced into assimilation during the late 19th and the early 20th centuries. During this time period a series of allotment laws went into effect after tribal treaties were set in place. The Allotment Act of 1887, also known as the Dawes Act, divided reservation land into individual parcels and were sold to Native Americans in exchange

See MOU, page 3

March 9, 2016 Joint Open House. The Tulalip Tribes hosted a Joint Open House for all reservation residents to provide information about the 2013 MOU and Tulalip government services. Tribal and County elected officials and more than 150 tribal and non-tribal Reservation residents attended.

Tulalip Tribes Vision

We gathered at Tulalip are one people.

We govern ourselves.

We will arrive at a time when each and every person has become most capable.

Together we create a healthy and culturally vibrant community

Tulalip Tribes Mission

We make available training, teaching and advice, both spiritual and practical.

Tulalip Tribes Values

- We respect the community of our elders past and present, and pay attention to their good words.
- 2. We uphold and follow the teachings that come from our ancestors.
- 3. It is valued work to uphold and serve our people.
- 4. We work hard and always do our best.
- 5. We show respect to every individual.
- We strengthen our people so that they may walk a good walk.
- 7. We do not gossip, we speak the truth.

for US citizenship, following a 25-year probationary period. After several generations have passed, the parcels were either passed down or re-sold to both Natives and non-Natives creating a problem in today's society regarding land regulations.

Land owned by non-Natives (fee simple lands) and land owned by tribal members (trust lands) that co-exist on tribal land is known as a "checkerboard reservation". In the 1855 Treaty of Point Elliot, the Tulalip Tribes ceded millions of acres of land in exchange for the 22,500 acres of land now known as the Tulalip Indian Reservation. In the exchange the Tribes received sovereignty for their people, as well as livelihood rights such as fishing and hunting. The Dawes Act stayed in effect until the year 1934 and many original owners of the parcels no longer have ties to the land. However, the parcels still remain a part of the Tulalip Reservation.

A disagreement between the Tribe and the county regarding land use and permitting caused some trust issues between non-Native landowners on the Tulalip Reservation and the Tulalip community. The Tulalip Tribes asserts land use regulatory jurisdiction over all lands within the exterior boundaries of the reservation. Snohomish County recognizes that within the Tulalip Reservation, trust lands and lands owned by Tulalip tribal members are subject to tribal regulations. However, Snohomish County asserts land use regulatory jurisdiction over fee simple lands within the exterior boundaries of the reservation that are not owned by Tulalip Tribal members, and regulates these lands according to both state and county requirements.

Eventually agreeing to disagree, a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) was signed in 2013 between the Tulalip Tribes and Snohomish County to oversee policies and procedures in regards to fee simple lands. The reason for the MOU is to establish a relationship between the two governments and it is geared toward improving coordination and cooperative problem solving. Through the MOU the Tribe and the county created a team consisting of elected officials from both sides of the governments that meet regularly to work on resolving issues such as land use and permitting.

On June 28 a public hearing was held at the Snohomish County Administration Building. According to Tulalip's Environmental Program Analyst, Julia Gold, the hearing was on proposal GPP9, or the Tribal Element Chapter, which was written by both tribal and county staff to comply with the directive from the MOU.

Julia stated, "The Tribal Element Chapter will replace occasional references to the tribes in the County's Comprehensive Plan with information about tribes and reservations, policy direction for communication, coordination, and culture with all three tribes in Snohomish County, [Sauk-Suiattle, Stillaguamish, and Tulalip] and for Tulalip specifically, provide direction toward exploring shared permitting or code enforcement schemes on non-tribal lands."

The Tribal Element Chapter is the first step in a long process that has yet to come. Common misconceptions about treaty rights and sovereignty are often the cause of heated debates between tribal and non-tribal members. The Tribal Element will clear up any miscommunications and allows the county and the Tribe to work efficiently together going forward.

The MOU and the Tribal Element Chapter received a lot of opposition from non-Native landowners who live in areas such as Mission Beach and Priest Point on the night of the hearing. Fee landowners gave testimonies claiming the Tribe has no jurisdiction over them, there is no non-tribal representation, and the Tribe is trying to take all of their land back.

Tulalip is working to preserve all 22,500 acres of land for the Tribe's future generations. The Tulalip Tribes has a policy that allows the Tribe to re-purchase the land when it becomes available. In attendance were many tribal members who testified on behalf of the Tulalip Planning Commission. Julia expressed that Mytyl Hernandez, Patti Gobin, and Ray Sheldon Jr. spoke in front of a hostile crowd, but spoke forcefully, eloquently, and respectfully.

"[Mytyl, Patti, and Ray] conveyed the message of a need to move forward and improve communication for the benefit of the entire community, while standing firm on the message that the reservation is the homeland of the Tulalip people," said Julia.

The Snohomish County Planning Commission voted to recommend the adoption of the Tribal Element Chapter but also recommended to remove four polices pertaining to Tulalip. The Tribal Element Chapter goes to the Snohomish County Council in August and another public hearing follows in September.

Barbara Dykes Ehrlichman, a Tulalip Tribes consultant, believes everyone is in agreement to move forward and establish policy framework stating, "Despite being a difficult hearing, the majority of the chapter sailed through without a problem. That is a big victory in itself."

Last year, hundreds of racers of all ages, from single rowing to 11-man teams, rowed intently across Tulalip Bay in physically demanding and spiritually uplifting competition. The Tulalip war canoe races brought nearly 200 participants from Coast Salish tribal communities both near and far. There were several canoe clubs who journeyed from Canada to attend.

In preparation for this year's Tulalip war canoe races and all the competitors and spectators sure to be involved, the originally scheduled

2-day event has been expanded to a 3-day event to take place Friday July 15 through Sunday July 17.

The history of war canoe races stems from canoes being a traditional means of transportation for coastal and island tribes along the Northwest's continental fringe. Not only did people use canoes for fishing and trading trips, but they also used them for raiding. Needing to be as quick as possible during these raids, tribes became experts at making canoes that could maneuver through the waters with ease. Both the individual manned canoe and team manned canoes required highly disciplined paddlers or pullers. These pullers often trained for months on end in order to become one when in the canoe. In some cases, the pullers would make use of a rhythmic chant to help ensure proper technique as they chanted their way across the shimmering, sunlit water.

In our modern era, tribes no longer raid each other, but find our connectedness to nature and the life giving water remains inherent to what it means to be Coast Salish. So the practice and traditions of war canoe racing evolved into what it is today, becoming an inter-tribal event that spiritually uplifts individuals and community while honoring traditions of our ancestors.

Join in on the fun and excitement this weekend, as the Tulalip war canoe races kick-off Friday July 15. There will be plenty of food and merchandise vendors to shop from between races.

2016 WIC Farmers Market Nutrition Program

Submitted by Erika Queen, WIC Nutrition Program, Karen I Fryberg Tulalip Health Clinic

WIC Farmers Market Nutrition Program (FMNP) for 2016 includes $20 worth of checks to be spent at eligible Farmers Markets on Washington-grown fresh fruits and veggies over the summer.

To be eligible to receive FMNP checks, your family must:

- Be participating in the WIC program at the Tulalip Health Clinic (other clinics provide FMNP for their clients)
- At least one WIC-participating family member must be at least 1 year old on or after 7/16/2016
- WIC staff can answer questions specific to the eligibility of your family.

Eligible families can receive $20 in checks for eligible foods.

There are not enough FMNP checks for all WIC clients, so they are on a first-come, first served basis. HALF of the available checks can be reserved; the other half will be available AT the Marysville Farmers Market – 1035 State Avenue (west side of State Avenue, between 10^{th} St and 72^{nd} St NE) – between 10am and 1pm on Saturday, July 16^{th} .

To claim checks ahead of time: click "Book Now" on Tulalip WIC's Facebook page OR go to tulalipwic.setmore. com and book an appointment.

- Select EITHER "Erika" or "Erika 2" as the "provider"
- The only available date is Saturday, July 16th
- You need to pick up your checks (at the market) between 10am and 1pm; you do not have to come at your appointment time.

When coming to pick up pre-claimed OR first come first served FMNP checks, one of the people who can sign checks at the grocery store must be present with their ID (Tribal ID, WA ID, WIC folder, or current WIC check).

Contact the Tulalip Health Clinic WIC office with any questions or concerns! 360-716-5625, equeen@tulaliptribesnsn.gov, or Facebook.com/TulalipWIC

4th Annual Community Wellness Conference Series

Submitted by Sarah Sense-Wilson

Announcing our 4th Annual Community Wellness Conference Series, Save the Dates on July 28th, August 4th and August 11th, 2016 from 8:00am (registration)- 1:00pm. Our Wellness Conference theme for this year is 'Native Activism; Past, Present, and Future'. The three day series will be held at the Tulalip Resort.

Our Wellness series is designed to educate, promote awareness, enhance tools and skills for advocacy and social change. We want to inspire youth, elders, and Tulalip community members to engage in conversations which challenge, provoke and stimulate critical thinking. The variety of performances, presentations and workshops will appeal to all generations and all community members. A sample of speakers and guest presenters include; Deborah Parker, Frank Waln, 1491's, Tanaya Winder, and Theresa Sheldon. Our goal is for all participants to be entertained, have fun, gain valuable knowledge and walk away with new insight, understandings and motivation to be part of the solution for social issues impacting our communities across Indian Country.

This is a free event and open to Tulalip Tribal community. Both lunch and snacks will be served each day of the series. In addition attendee's will have the special opportunity for autograph signing with the famed comedic group 1491's and with Musician Frank Waln. This event is sponsored by Tulalip Tribes Problem Gambling Program and Smoking Cessation Program. Our agenda will be posted soon. We look forward to seeing you all there on all three days of Community Wellness Conference se-
