Honoring Our Culture

Art Festival from front page

By Micheal Rios

Hundreds of artistically inclined students strolled through the makeshift art gala that was the Don Hatch Youth Center on Thursday, April 18th, for the annual Native American Student Art Festival. Accompanied by their families, friends and teachers, the student-artists ranging from 1st to 12th grade wowed festival attendees and judges with their imaginative creations.

“The Art Festival is an opportunity for each student to express themselves in a positive way. It is the largest community event we have where we get to showcase our Native students,” explained Jessica Bustad, Positive Youth Development Manager. “It’s the pride each of the students have in their artwork, their parents and community members coming together to support our children that make this event so great.”

For more than two decades now, Marysville School District has partnered with the Tulalip Tribes to dedicate an evening to the art scene created by emerging Tulalip artists and other Native students within the district. The Festival gives these young people an opportunity to show off their creative talents to the community, while getting a chance to take home a coveted 1st place ribbon.

Artists were able to win 1st, 2nd or 3rd place, plus honorable mention, in a variety of artistic mediums. Categories included culture, drawing, painting, writing, mixed media, sculpture, digital art, and pure heart. The top four from each grade and category not only received a ceremonial ribbon as recognition for their talents, but a monetary prize as well.

“Everyone that attends is a winner by the end of the event because they’ve helped to create unity and teamwork,” said Josh Fryberg, Youth Services Manager. “The Festival turned out amazing. From all of the families sharing a meal together to seeing the looks on each person’s face when they win a raffle to seeing all the art being showcased for all to see.”

This year’s Native Art Festival received a whopping 700+ submissions, with the most popular category being painting. There were many young artists who showed off their diverse talents by submitting artwork in as many categories as they could. Taylee Warbus and Samara Davis were two such overachievers who claimed top honors in multiple categories.

“It was amazing to see just how talented our Native students are; the new ideas and concepts they come up with every year continue to surprise us judges,” marveled Native Advocate Doug Salinas. “Every kid has the capability to be an artist because their imagination has no limits.”

Native culture and art are often thought of us intrinsically tied together or, in the case of Savannah Black Tomahawk and Lilly Jefferson, they are sewn together. According to their mothers, neither Savannah nor Lilly had ever sewn before prior to creating traditional ribbon skirts to enter in the Festival. By putting a modern twist on a traditional concept, Savannah’s Disney princess skirt and Lilly’s metallic blue with shimmery pink ribbons both received high praise and earned an additional ribbon – 2nd place and 1st place, respectively.

“As coordinating staff, we look at every single piece of artwork and recognize how much work each student puts in. Some art pieces show real vulnerability in the students, they are showing themselves and expressing their thoughts, feelings and dreams,” added Jessica. “It is also very gratifying when students are already coming to us with their creative ideas for next year’s Art Festival.”

If you missed out on this year’s Student Art Festival, each and every piece of authentic Native American art that received a winning ribbon will be on display at the Hibulb Cultural Center from now – May 5th.

“I wanted to put something together that represented a lot of things I really care about and love. I love looking at the stars, which is represented with the night sky. I just love succulents and learning about them, so I added a lot of plants. The clock read 5:17 that represents my birthday. It’s definitely a patchwork painting with lots of colors that shows a variety of my passions.”

Tashina Cortez – Painting. Third grader at Grace Academy.

“My painting is called String Art Plants. In order to make it you have to put paint in a bowl and then dip a string into the paint and get it really wet. Then you take the string out and just make swirls and twirls on the canvas. My favorite plant is the middle one because it looks like the one from Avatar!”

“My paddle represents the layers of life. At the top is the sun, then Earth represented by a beach and the ocean, followed by a mermaid, and then finally the salmon. The colors are bright at the top and get darker the further down you go just like in nature.”

“My sculpture depicts sadness, which is the black layers, and its peeling away to show an underlying happiness, which in my case is my family. When your sad it’s important to remember who are the ones that love you and are truly there for you.”

“My inspiration was Chihuly’s art, like his glass blowing. First, I had to cut all around these plastic water bottles to make the swirly parts. Then I painted every single one a different color because if they were all the same color it wouldn’t be artistic.”

Officer Powers receives grand send-off

By Kalvin Valdillez

On April 19, Officer Phillip Powers walked into the Marysville Mountain View Arts and Technology High School for his last day on duty as a School Resource Officer and his last day as a Tulalip Police Officer, until he returns to the country in 2020. As a member of the United States Army, Powers was called up to serve a yearlong deployment overseas to protect our Nation's freedom.

Officer Powers found a home within the Tulalip community upon graduating from the Police Academy and becoming a member in blue for the Tulalip Police Department. Shortly after, he was named the School Resource Officer for all of the schools in the Tulalip area including the Betty J. Taylor Early Learning Academy, Quil Ceda Tulalip Elementary, Heritage High School and Marysville Arts and Tech, where he built strong connections with the community members, instructors and students.

As he said his final goodbyes at each school, he was met with cheers and applause at Marysville Arts and Tech, where the students organized a surprise farewell party for the officer. A look of shock, followed by a large smile spread across his face as he made his way through the school's cafeteria to the center stage, while the young adults honored the local hero with a well-deserved standing ovation.

The law official was presented with a goodbye card, which all of the students signed, before a number of youth, school faculty, family, friends and fellow officers shared memories as well as expressed words of gratitude for the impact he's had within the community. During the emotional morning assembly, nearly each speaker wiped away tears before embracing Officer Powers with a hug. The teens recalled games of gatorball and conversations about movies and pop culture. And some kids simply thanked him for acknowledging them on some of their toughest days.

"Powers, my man I love you dude," stated an Arts and Tech student. "I just want to thank you. I know cops get a lot of crap nowadays, but I think you changed the way that's perceived, especially in this community. You're fun, you know the culture, you listen to hip hop, which is lit. I think you changed the way a lot of young people think and feel about law enforcement, because we got to know you on a more personal level. I want to thank you for dedicating your life to protecting and serving our country, whether it be locally or globally. Thank you for protecting our freedom."

The sendoff ended with students lining up on both sides of the hallway while Officer Powers walked through, giving each student a high-five.

"I feel very appreciative," said Officer Powers. "I try to make a positive, lasting impact on the kids as much as I can just by being genuine and bringing a caring aspect. Sometimes you don't see the effect you have on people, some of the kids won't ever show it. To hear some of them talk about their interactions with me in a heartfelt manner, that's different than what I normally see on a daily basis, and it was so special."

Tulalip Youth Council celebrates Earth Day

By Kalvin Valdillez

As the original caretakers of this land, Native American people share a much deeper connection to, and appreciation of, Mother Earth. We understand that the Earth provides life for us all, gifting us with natural resources like clean water, air and soil. It's important that we honor all of the work our ancestors did, in order for us to utilize those resources to this day, while also making sure we do our part for the generations to come. And we need to do so with urgency. Because of mass pollution in our waterways, more and more marine species are added to the endangered list each year. And because of the carbon emissions we are releasing into the atmosphere every day, the earth is heating up at an accelerated pace. As the ice caps continue to melt, the entire world will experience sea level rise and extreme weather in the not-so-distant future.

The people of Tulalip are beginning to take matters into their own hands to preserve and protect our environment with a number of strong efforts throughout the community. The Tribe is among the many leaders of environmental advocates, actively fighting for Mother Earth on both governmental and non-governmental fronts. For example, this year alone the Tulalip Natural Resources Department hosted a planting party where they planted 2,000 trees in the restored Qwuloolt Estuary. And tribal member Colin Hood decided to initiate the Trash Tag Challenge on the reservation, single handedly collecting twenty bags of trash in the Battle Creek neighborhood before inviting his friends to participate in the challenge as well.

For Earth Day this year, the Tribe granted its employees two hours of excused leave to pick up litter on the shore of Mission Beach, where over fifteen trash bags were filled and items like tires and floorboards were removed from the beach. The following day, April 23, the Youth Council organized a cleanup party of their own, dubbed the Belated Earth Day Celebration, hosted at the Don Hatch Youth Center.

“It’s the small things that help save the environment,” said Youth Council member, Evelyn-Vega Simpson. “Instead of plastic bags use paper, instead of plastic straws use reusable; and plant trees, flowers and plants.”

Although it certainly made the task a bit more difficult, a little wind couldn’t stop a great cleanup, executed by Tulalip’s future leaders, from happening. The three-hour event began with a blessing as the group of approximately fifty volunteers formed a circle to participate in prayer and song. The volunteers then broke off into small groups, with trash bags and extended litter grabbers in hand, they began picking up litter around the youth center, gym, beach, skate park and ball fields.

In addition to the youth council members, a large number of volunteers participated from several different departments, including Community Health (Diabetes Prevention and Care, SNAP-Ed), that donated cedar trees as giveaway prizes as well as prepared delicious herbal smoothies and teas for the crew. The Public Works and General Services teams joined the council during the pick-up and got their hands dirty, as truckloads of filled trash bags were collected throughout the afternoon. Youth Services also played a role, assisting the youth with both the planning of the event as well as collecting trash.

“This is one of our biggest collaborations that we’ve done as a youth council,” stated Marc Robinson, Youth Council Advisor. “We collaborated with Youth Services, Natural Resources, Community Health, Public Works and Education. They all came to participate and they all had something to contribute for Earth Day. The Youth Council likes to raise awareness about taking care of our environment and they like to work from the ground up. They are working hard, trying to inspire the whole community, as well as educate and bring everybody together.”

After all their hard work, the volunteers were rewarded with a BBQ dinner and gifted items in honor of Earth Day.

“We found lots of plastic bottles, energy drink cans, napkins and plastic bags that were thrown into the bushes,” said Evelyn. “We have reusable bags and straws for people to take with them and use. This event is important because we are trying to teach people how to reduce their plastic use. We think it’s really important to keep our land clean, we enjoy helping out as much as we can and hope to inspire others to do the same.”

Easter Bunny promotes literacy at TELA

By Kalvin Valdillez

Kids rushed to their classroom windows for a chance to see the Easter Bunny on the morning of April 18. The bunny entered each class of the Betty J. Early Learning Academy (TELA) to visit with the students before the Easter holiday. He was met with high fives, hugs, gazes of uncertainty and also the occasional student who was frightened by such a large character. But after witnessing their classmates embrace him, most of them came around.

This is the third year in a row that the bunny has paid the kids at TELA a visit. Last year, he helped the academy promote reading by hand delivering a Native American illustrated book to each student. The books originally passed out were ‘Learn to Count’ and ‘Good Morning World’, and are each an edition of a four-part series. The bunny completed the series this year, gifting the younger students ‘Learn to Color’ and the older kids, ‘Animals of the Salish Sea.’

“It’s pretty fun watching the kids get excited to see the Easter Bunny as well as receive a book,” says TELA Family and Community Engagement Coordinator, Katrina Lane. “We decided to hand out the Native American books to promote literacy throughout the year. We thought it would be a good pair to promote literacy during Easter, instead of just candy. Getting our kids to read, and read about our culture, is important.”

In addition to the brand-new books gifted, the Academy welcomed the Sno-Isle Library Bookmobile that afternoon, where parents could check out books and sign up for library cards with their kids during pick-up hours. The Easter Bunny also extended his visit after school, so the students could take individual photos with their families.

April's Students of the Month

By Micheal Rios

In partnership with Tulalip's own Education department, the Indigenous Education division of Marysville School District (MSD) recognized four praiseworthy youngsters for continued success in the classroom. Hosted during the MSD school board meeting on April 15, Ily Enick, Tessalyn Napeahi, Sebastian Gomez, and Imajine Moses were honored as students of the month in front of their proud families and dedicated educators.

One student was selected from elementary, one from middle school, and one from high school to represent the varying levels of education. An additional student was selected to represent the recently added Pure Heart category.

"The Pure Heart category is for our students who have exhibited kindness, caring and respect for others and who have worked to overcome various obstacles," explained Deborah Parker, MSD's Director of Indigenous Education. "Our Pure Heart students have provided us with inspiration and deserve recognition for their perseverance and willingness to grow as a student."

Indigenous Special Education Liaison

Amy Sheldon introduced 2nd grader Ily Enick as this month's Pure Heart student of the month. "I have been blessed to know Ily since he was only 3-years-old," she said. "We are really proud of how much he has accomplished this year. Ily loves science and is really good at technology. In fact, he regularly helps out his teacher when she is flustered with some new piece of classroom tech."

His Kellogg Marsh Elementary teacher also shared, "He's a joy to have in class and everyone is always excited to come work with him. Plus, he makes us smile all the time."

Elementary student of the month honors went to Tessalyn. The 5th grader was described as a quiet leader who always stays on task. She was also described as being kind and courteous to all her friends and school staff.

Next up, 8th grader Sebastian's sustained excellence in the classroom was heralded by tribal advocate Courtney Jefferson. "He's honest, open-minded, and really good at staying focused. He's just a real pleasure to work with," she said. "What I really like about him is he's a respectful self-starter who sets a positive role to all our students."

The final recognition of the evening went to the 9th grader Imajine Moses. She was introduced by tribal advocate Doug Salinas. "I've watched her grow as student from being a kindergartener at Quil Ceda to now being a freshman at Marysville-Pilchuck," he reflected. "I'm so proud of her and what she has accomplished. As a high school freshman, Imajine has a 3.5 grade point average and balanced school work with playing varsity basketball. She's a wonderful person who also does volunteer work through her church."

Going forward, a selection committee will review all student nominations based on their academics and community engagement. Each month the awardees will be recognized as students of the month during the MSD regular board meeting.

To the Youth Center and your unity mural

You honored 5 great people, in your MURAL but in my opinion you forgot the one that spent the most time in those buildings – my sister Caroline “Uppy” Jones Thornberry. She started working for the Tribe from 1976 TO 2007 until she got sick – she worked 31 years.

She worked in Community Services and was in charge of not only being the head cook for the Tribe she was also the Enrollment Officer for all those years. She spent many hours not only cooking, but planning all the tribal events during those years, Easter, Elections, Halloween, Christmas – any tribal function she planned it and cooked for it right in those buildings. Sure the Kitchen is named after her and I was told by one of the youth workers “Her picture is up on the wall, and her apron too so we didn’t forget her.” I told him that Penoke had a photo box with his picture and some other information on him out in the hallway of the Youth Center and you included him in the mural so why not my sister? He apologized to me, but I told him they owed Chuckie Jones, her son, and her granddaughters Carrie and Roxy a public apology for forgetting her not me.

As her sister I was very hurt by them forgetting her and even though my brother Gunny was honored I would not attend the ceremony.

I did talk to the youth that planned this and he said he wanted to know the people who were honored with their names being placed there, which is a great idea, he also wanted other youth to know about them to. I also told him they should talk to elders who know who worked at that location when planning things like this because my sister put in more of her time than any of the other ones honored – 31 years is a long time – you do not find too many people that are that dedicated to their people.

Joy Jones Lacy

Obituary

Michael A. Brown III

Michael Anthony Brown III Our beloved Angel Warrior, Sunrise December 5, 2006 passed away April 7, 2019 with his loving parents by his side, Bridget and Nate Brown.

He was a Tulalip Tribal Member, raised on the reservation, attended Totem Middle School, very proud to be in 6th grade. His big heart for his family and friends shined through his beautiful eyes, always followed that shine with a big smile. His great sense of humor and humble love with endless happiness, never let anyone go without “I love you” a hug, a kiss or even a knuckle bump. A special place in his heart “treasure chest” he kept his siblings, Mikhaio and Miniyah. He loved travelling, mountains, camping, holidays and birthdays with family, which always included random dancing at any moment. Bringing joy to everyone, something he set as a goal, he set goals and finished all with positivity.
