Employees Recognizing Employees

April 2014

Rafael Madera, a staff member of the custodian department, has been selected as a Famous Employee by bədaʔchəlh. Rafael's work presence at bədaʔchəlh began about six weeks ago, and he has made an immediate impression with improvements to the care of the building. bədaʔchəlh appreciate his thoroughness and thoughtfulness in attending to the communal spaces and private offices. As a nineteen-year-old Tulalip Tribes young man, Rafael had the following quote inked on his own forearm: "Far and away the best prize that life has to offer is the chance to work hard at work worth doing." It is obvious from his great work at bədaʔchəlh that those words can be seen in action.

Flames devour garage and car at Sunny Shores on the Tulalip Indian Reservation

Firemen test the burnt out garage floor to reach the remains of the vehicle.

arson, the case has been turned over to the Tulalip Police Department for investigation.

Snohomish County Fire Marshall Bruce Pulver said, "This appears to be a criminal case. The house was vacant when we arrived. There was nothing found at the scene that explained how the fire happened, and the fact that it was vacant makes it very suspicious."

The path of the fire has also raised suspicions of arson, as it appears to have started from outside the house.

"The fire appears to have been started in the breezeway, before engulfing the home," Pulver said.

Tulalip Police Sergeant Sherman Pruitt is currently investigating claims of arson and has declined to comment on the case, though he is interviewing neighbors looking for possible witnesses.

The investigation is ongoing.

Tulalip Bay, Stanwood, Getchell, and North County fire departments responded to a garage fire at Sunny Shores at approximately 12:30 p.m. March 24. Fire crews arrived to find the structure fully engulfed in flames with a brand new Mercedes still inside.

"There was nothing left of the roof, the walls were almost completely gone, the metal door had melted down, and the car was gone," said Tulalip Bay Fire Chief Teri Dodge.

The fire was discovered by homeowner Heidi Atterson, who called 911. Her husband, Steve Atterson, arrived on scene shortly thereafter.

Water tenders brought water down the one-lane access road, because there are no hydrants in the area. After extinguishing the fire, crews sprayed foam on the scorched remnants to prevent accelerants from reigniting the blaze.

Chief Dodge explained, "Garage fires tend to burn very quickly. Once the fire breaches the roof or the walls, the oxygen feeds it. Most garages have accelerants inside as well, which make garage fires that much more devastating."

In addition to limited access and limited water, there was a downed power line that crews had to work around until Snohomish County PUD was able to cut power to the line.

The garage burned completely to the ground, leaving only the floor and what remained of the vehicle inside.

The cause of the fire has yet to be determined, though it is suspected to have begun as an electrical fire.

With limited water, fire crews were able to extinguish the fire, but not until the structure was almost completely gone.

Randy Ervin's GoFundMe campaign opened to help deal with life changing stroke

Randy Ervin and family.

By Niki Cleary, photo by Alyson Pennant

Randy Ervin is a guy who loves life. Ask his many friends who have enjoyed, or lovingly suffered, his bizarrely funny bitstrips and constant Christmas countdowns. He's also a friend, a mentor, a beloved co-worker and leader. He's a beacon of hope for those in recovery, and a poster child for living better sober than addicted. Since February 25, Randy has been completely incapacitated after suffering a massive stroke. He is looking at returning to a two-story home and full time caregiving, with no prospects of returning to a normal life anytime soon.

Randy's wife of 23 years, Tina Ervin, painted the picture.

"I left the house on February 25, I was only gone for about half an hour," she explained. "I came home and he was sitting in the chair and he was just sitting there. He was non-responsive. I pulled up on his face, and I said, he's having a stroke."

Randy was in a medically induced coma for a week and a half. Doctors kept him breathing with a ventilator while they monitored the swelling in his brain. It took another two weeks to slowly bring him out of the coma.

"His right side is paralyzed," Ervin said, describing her husband's symptoms. "He's learning how to speak all over again. He lost the ability to form words when he tries to talk and he's learning to write with his left hand.

"If you write 'apple, banana' and leave an open space, he's trying to figure out what to put in that open space, but he can't tell you that the line of words means fruit. His brain is still not firing the way it should. Three hours a day he's in physical and speech therapy, they're teaching him how to use the other side of his brain."

Family and friends aren't the same for Randy either, many of his memories are missing because of the stroke.

"He didn't recognize his brother, his best friend," said Ervin. "Our anniversary is the 23rd of this month [March], and he didn't even remember that. But he did recognize Pete Warbus from the casino. He loves his crew and his job. Other than his family, that's his life."

A family friend, Mike Pablo, helped Ervin set up a GoFundMe account to help raise money for Randy's expenses, which are numerous. The stroke is the most recent in a cascade of medical complications. In 2013 Randy was diagnosed with a tumor in his colon. Because colon cancer runs in his family, the best option was to remove it surgically. After the surgery, things went downhill quickly.

"He was eating dinner and he coughed," said Ervin. "His shirt started filling up with blood. By the end of the night it turned brown and started to smell really bad. He stood up and it just gushed out of his belly. I rushed him to the hospital and the surgeon said, 'Why did you wait so long!'"

"They said his small intestine blew out like an inner tube blows out if you fill it too much. From there, his kidneys shut down. He spent more than 48 days in the hospital. It was a long road, but he finally went back to work December 23rd. The aneurysm came out of nowhere."

Because of his ongoing medical care Randy has no paid time off remaining, leaving his family deprived of the primary breadwinner. Because his leave has been exhausted he will likely lose his job at the Tulalip Resort, a job that currently provides the medical insurance paying for his care. Ervin said they're doing what they can, but she's concerned about how to pay for ongoing medical expenses and the necessary remodel of their home.

"I talked to Jay Napeahi in housing because my house is not set up for a wheelchair and I don't have a full-sized bathroom downstairs. In the meantime they're going to put us up in a duplex. We're trying to raise some funds, we're going to have to buy a wheelchair and some other equipment and I'm not sure how much his insurance will cover."

His co-workers are doing what they can.

"We are definitely feeling the loss of him not being here," said friend and co-worker Ashley Hammons. "It was a mess here, and everyone was trying to hold it together."

Resort employee Aliana Diaz agreed.

"It was pretty bad to the point where we approached the Employee Assistance Program and let them know that several of our team members were affected by it. I was giving them a heads up that people might need them."

Slot Assistant Director James Ham, who has known Randy for years, described the outpouring of support, "Randy did a lot to give back. He would talk to anyone in addiction and recovery, he was reaching out constantly. I've seen a lot of people donate hours, there's definitely been an outreach here."

Coping with medical bills, the trauma of becoming a full time caregiver and the unknown challenges of the future might seem overwhelming, but Ervin's been too busy to dwell on it.

"Ever since this happened it's been, 'What's the worst case scenario?' I've just tried to get everything going rather than sitting around and crying all the time. Right now we need a different bed, probably just a full size, because our water bed is too big [for the duplex]."

If you would like to help Randy's family, check out www.gofundme.com and search Randy Ervin. The family is hoping to raise $15,000 to remodel the family's home and get Randy set up for full time caregiving. As of March 25, $1,270 has been raised towards that goal. Ervin said every bit helps.

Crowdfunding is becoming the new hand up

By Niki Cleary

At the Tulalip 2014 Annual General Council, Tulalip Tribal citizen Mike Pablo made a motion to create an emergency relief fund for tribal members who are in need, either due to emergent medical situations, or because of natural disasters, fire or other catastrophes beyond their control. When he made the motion he was thinking about Tulalip citizen Randy Ervin who recently suffered a life-altering stroke. The motion was tabled, so instead, Mike helped the Ervin family to set up a crowdfunding site.

Increasingly, crowdfunding has become a way for people to directly support their causes. Whether it's Matika Wilbur's use of Kickstarter to launch Project 562, a photo project documenting contemporary Native America, or Randy Ervin's GoFundMe campaign, citizens are turning to their peers, rather than a government agency, for assistance.

Crowdfunding isn't new, in 1884 the American Committee for the Statue of Liberty ran short on money and Joseph Pulitzer launched an enormously popular fundraising effort. More than 125,000 people donated (mostly donations of less than $1) ultimately bringing in over $100,000. According to the website measuringworth.com, $1 in 1884 is equivalent to $24.50 today. So, a similar donation by modern citizens would mean about $25 each to raise around $2.5 million. This example is clear evidence that financial support for a cause doesn't have to be a financial burden in order to be effective. Crowdfunding quickly becoming a way for tiny businesses, broke inventors, and unknown musicians to launch a career. Unlike traditional investing, crowdsource funding doesn't promise a return on investment, just the knowledge that your money is directly funding a cause that you support. According to the 2013 Massolution Crowdfunding Industry Report (<http://www.crowdsourcing.org/research>) crowdfunding is anticipated to bring in $5.1 billion in total global funding for the year.

Redesigning family reunite programs

Yelabted Talking Circle helping families heal

Article by Brandi N. Montreuil

Tulalip parents with open or closed Indian Child Welfare cases or Tulalip bəda?chəlh cases are receiving a new support network in yəlabtəd Talking Circle, a reunite program that bridges the gap between parents and social workers to offer encouragement, realistic advice, and advocacy for families in order to re-establish family units.

yəlabtəd, a loose translation of the Lushootseed word meaning large family, is a unlike traditional Reunite programs that are extensions of social services monitored by mental health therapists. Instead yəlabtəd is a peer to peer group comprised of parents who have prior personal experiences with the child welfare system, who will work with parents of children in foster care, Tulalip bəda?chəlh and tribal services to mentor families.

"When parents get their children taken away, that is a trauma," said Kay Feather, a Reunite specialist with Tulalip Family Services. "Most of the time it is because of drugs or neglect so parents will be either detoxing or experiencing traumatic grief, this [yəlabtəd] is a stabilizing factor for them."

"Imagine somebody you don't know coming to your home knocking on your door and handing you a court order telling you, you need to go take a UA in a certain amount of time, and if you don't then they are taking your kids. And if you do, and it comes back dirty, then they take your kids. That is pretty much a standard a lot of the time," said yəlabtəd Talking Circle mentor and Tulalip tribal member Katie Jones, whose own battle with addiction cost her custody of her children temporarily.

Scenarios such as Jones describes often leave parents uncertain on how to fulfill court ordered requirements, such as fulfilling parenting courses, drug treatment classes and submitting to weekly urinalysis. This unfamiliarity often leads to unsuccessful requirement completion and increases the number of children in foster or kinship care.

"This is going to help parents reunite with their families a lot faster. Everything is confidential. We are not here to judge them," said Feather. "Every mentor we have is someone who has gone through the

Community

same process whether because of drugs, neglect, or domestic violence. Parents will have someone to turn to and help them understand things such as when you're supposed to go take a UA. And also, parents will learn that claiming their part in this process empowers them to change."

Weekly meetings provide parents the opportunity to learn positive decision-making, receive help with meeting case plan goals, and promote parent engagement through the life of the case.

"You will learn what it is that cost you custody of your kids and you learn not to repeat it again when you commit to the process," said Jones, who states denial keeps parents from accepting accountability and repeating dangerous patterns. "We understand how it feels to be in the same situation. It is overwhelming with all the things you suddenly have to do and battle your addiction at the same time. We are here to help."

yòlabtòd Talking Circle meetings are held every Thursday at 5:30 p.m. at the Tulalip Family Services Building C. For more information about yòlabtòd or its meetings, please contact Kay Feather at 360-716-4311 or Katie Jones at 425-923-6232.

Culture Night from front page

Culture night features lessons on traditional arts and crafts and always includes time for singing and dancing. Cultural specialists Tenika Fryberg and Taylor Henry prepare an evening of culture and community through games and other presentations for each culture night. On March 24th, they presented the traditional sle-hal game.

Sle-hal, translated as bone game or also referred to as stick game, is a traditional game that is played throughout the Salishan area, from Northern Oregon up to Haida Gwaii and as far east as Browning, Montana. The goal is to win all of the stick by finding the unmarked bone, much like the children's game 'pick a hand.' The number of sticks varies between seven and eleven, but the goal remains the same.

Culture Night is held every Monday at 5:30 p.m. in the portables across from the old tribal center, now the youth center, at 6700 Totem Beach Rd. For more information contact Taylor Henry at (360) 716-4916.

Strengths and Needs Assessment Results

Submitted by Yvette McGimpsey, Family Haven

Family Haven staff would like to thank the Tulalip community for participating in our goal of completing 300 Strengths and Needs Assessments for young women 14-17. In our efforts to reach all tribal members the surveys were included in a Tribal wide mailing, a special meeting was held with the elders, another with the youth at Heritage High School, but the majority of the Strengths and Needs Assessments came from the General Council meeting.

Thank you to everyone who participated. With the information we collected, it will give us a better understanding of how we can provide the necessary tools to make our Girls' Group a success!

Our prize winners are:

- One night's stay at Great Wolf Lodge – Angie Hatch
- $50 Visa gift card – Raymond Paul
- $25 Chevron gift card – Kiah Fryberg

UW-Bothell & University of Washington Student Tour

Jeanne Steffener, Higher ED

On February 26, 2014, twenty-eight Marysville-Pilchuck High School students, school counselors (Matt Remlee, Rick Belmont & Zee Zimicum), chaparones (Taylor Henry, Rick Morris, Doug Salinas & Debbie Walther) in conjunction with the Higher ED Department (Feliccia Emhoolah, Jeanne Steffener & Shawneen Zackuse) took a trip to two of the University of Washington campuses, UW-Bothell and University of Washington in Seattle. It was a fun learning experience. This trip was the first in a new series of excursions showing Tulalip students college campuses in western Washington.

The day began with a trip down to UW-Bothell. Rachael Meares, Admissions Advisor and Native American Outreach Specialist, was our UW-Bothell hostess. At UW-Bothell, Rachael started the morning off with brunch and a talk about the campus with a video accompaniment. Our students were able to learn what the college at this location has to offer academically. We delved into other topics of interest pertaining to housing, campus clubs and advantages available to Native American students. Our stop at UW-Bothell ended with going to the North Creek Forest Restoration Project.

The North Creek Forest Restoration Project is a partnership between UW-Bothell and the Friends of North Creek. Our students learned about the project, UW involvement with the project and finished up with our students actually participating in the project by planting trees. Apparently, Tulalip Tribes donated to the project and was one of the first groups to affirm the project. The Friends of the North Creek Forest wrote about our visit in their recent newsletter goes into more detail on our visit. <http://www.friendsnorthcreekforest.org/2/post/2014/03/two->

At the University of Washington – Seattle, we were met by Tommy Segundo, UW Native American liaison. Our first stop on campus was at “By George” in Red Square, a popular food hang-out. This cafeteria style food area offered wonderful treats like Starbucks Coffee, smoothies, sandwiches, salads, soups, etc. There was an amazing amount of choices. Higher ED Department provided Husky lunch cards for everyone in the group and they seemed to enjoy it.

After lunch, we toured the HUB (Husky Union Building). The HUB is the center of student life at UW. The HUB provides services to students, staff and faculty of the UW community plus food and video games, etc. At this point, we were introduced to UW student ambassadors. At another stop along the way, we looked at the ear monument and the “feet in concrete” which apparently is the only diversity monument at UW while listening to our four UW student ambassadors imparting other interesting tidbits about UW. Our students seemed to really enjoy their time listening attentively to the student ambassadors who did not seem to be very much older than our students.

The Library was the next stop on the trek. The library is huge and offers an amazing collection, databases, jobs and is definitely a go-to space. The last stop on the way was the new Longhouse site where students filled out information for the school.

Lost

It's time to spread joy,
And bring happiness to all,
To do my best
to keep hold of hope,
To not let down my family,
If they should ever call,
I now live a life
that's free of dope,
So now I no longer can fall,
I pull back if addiction gives a tug on the rope,
I no longer try
and hide from it,
Or do my best to stall,
I take it head on
and do my best to cope,
In the end of it.
I'm the one still standing tall,
I don't ever want another toke,
My life is win or lose,
There is no draw,

All I do each day
that passes by me,
Is think of all that I should know,
So I never again in my life
have to crawl,
I work hard everyday,
To do my best to grow,
That includes me
following the law,
It's just a little step forward
to me to be shown,
That all big things
had to start out small,
From the highest
that one can go,
To the lowest of the low
that one could fall,
So while I'm down
I take hold of hope,
And put to work
all that I was taught,
From how to wash clean away

from addiction,
Life's fresh scented bar of soap,
My life is all that I've got.
This is my hope
on paper I wrote,
So I put in all to my new life
I will not stop,
My life's always feeling
like it's on the ropes,
My past choices got me with my freedom lost,
I'll never hang
my head down low though,
In the end I'll be a better man,
So my time inside,
Inner peace is what I bought,
And that right there is something that is priceless,
But yet thirty months later
I paid the cost.

Avel Medina Jr.

Smile

I don't want you to feel down, or feel sorrow because I'm away.
I always want you to be around, because with you in my life,
I know all is going to be okay.
I only wish for you to be happy, to show you my love only grows for you,
each passing day.
Every time that I talk to you on times
you're feeling blue,
I hope to bring a smile
to your pretty face.
So if you're reading this, think happy
thoughts my love,
Because it's from your babe.

For my Angel
From the one who fell for you.

Avel Medina
