Tulalip well-represented in Strawberry Festival’s Grand Parade

By Micheal Rios

A Marysville/Tulalip community tradition since 1932, thousands of families filled the sidewalks of State Street over Father’s Day weekend to enjoy the Strawberry Festival’s Grand Parade. Tulalip Resort Casino was recognized as the top-level, Orca sponsor for the 88th annual Strawberry Festival.

The festival took place June 14 to 16. During those days Marysville Middle School and Asbery Field were home to children’s activities, live bands, a tal-

Smoke billowed from the Tulalip Longhouse on the overcast morning of June 15. On the inside, a circle of traditional dancers moved in a counterclockwise motion to the sounds of strong drumbeats and melodies sang in the traditional Lushootseed language. As the singers began the final chorus, a young man rushed out of the longhouse, asking people who were outside, “is he coming, can you see him?”

Two younger kids joined the youth’s quest as he ran to the edge of the bluff overlooking Tulalip Bay.

“There he is,” he exclaimed and then ran back into the longhouse to report that the honored guest was nearby.

Moments later, the Tulalip singers and dancers emerged from the longhouse and began walking toward the shore of the bay. Draped in Coast Salish garb, tribal members continued to drum and sing, welcoming the visitor to the community.

Transported on the sacred Tulalip cedar canoe, Big Brother, the guest laid upon a bed of cedar branches.

Every year, the Tulalips continue to uphold a tradition that was revived by Harriette Shelton Dover during the late seventies, after it was nearly lost due to years of forced assimilation. The Salmon Ceremony, is an annual event that welcomes the first yubəč, or king salmon, of the fishing season. The honoring is held not only to ensure that Tulalip fisherman have a safe year on the waters, but also to thank the salmon for graciously providing the Tribe with sustenance since time immemorial.

“We honor the gift of our visitor, yubəč, Big Chief King Salmon,” said Tulalip Board of Director and Salmon Ceremony leader, Glen Gobin. "We're harvesting from nature again, it's how we honor and respect that, to ensure that he's always going to be there. Him and his people will always be there, returning to take care of our people as they always have."

The king salmon is brought ashore from the Salish waters as tribal members offer a welcoming song. The yubăč is carried into the longhouse where the traditional singers and dancers perform a blessing for the guest.

When the blessing is complete, the festivities continue at the Greg Williams Court where Salmon Ceremony participants and spectators are treated to a delicious salmon meal. Once everybody is well-fed, the visitor is sent back to the water to return to its community and tell its people of the Tribes' hospitality. In return, many salmon will journey to Tulalip's waters throughout the season to feed the community because of the honor and respect shown during the ceremony.

After another successful honoring, Glen reflected on this year's ceremony, proudly beaming about the amount of participation from local youth.

"It's important that our young ones understand our teachings, our traditions and where they come from," said Glen. "So much has been lost and taken away that we're not left with what was originally there, but we do the best we can. It's really encouraging to see the smiles on their faces when they come and they're wanting to participate. Nobody makes them do anything, they come here out of a desire within themselves. I liken it to when I was young and heard the beat of a drum, I was just drawn to it. I see that in these young ones. When they see bits and pieces of our culture and then they get to participate in it, they understand what ownership of it means. If they have that, then we're ensured for the next generations."

Quil Ceda Elementary honors Tulalip sovereignty on Flag Day

“Our flag is so important because it represents our people who make up the Tulalip nation.”

- Chelsea Craig

By Micheal Rios

Outside the front entrance of Quil Ceda Tulalip Elementary is a flag pole that, since its inception, had one purpose and one purpose only – to fly the red, white and blue United States flag. As of June 14, that singular purpose is no longer and a once lone U.S. flag is now joined by the resilient and bold orca symbolizing the Tulalip Tribes.

“Beginning today, the Tulalip Tribes flag will be flying at QCT every day, right along with our American flag,” said Assistant Principal J.J. Jensen during the school’s morning assembly. “We want our community, our students and their families to know that when they are here, they are on sovereign Tulalip land.”

“We are very unique in that we are a sovereign nation,” added Tulalip tribal member and Cultural Specialist, Chelsea Craig. “Our flag is so important because it represents our people who make up the Tulalip nation. Our flag also honors our veterans, those who chose to serve and those who sacrificed their lives so we can all be here today.”

On May 30, 1916, President Woodrow Wilson issued a presidential proclamation establishing a national Flag Day on June 14. The day commemorates the adoption of the stars and stripes as the official flag of the United States. Fast forward 103 years to the Flag Day celebration at Tulalip’s on-reservation elementary, where staff, students and Tulalip veterans assembled to recognize not only the importance of U.S. nationhood, but tribal sovereignty as well.

Led by students proudly holding the Tulalip flag, and followed by young drummers and singers sharing their culture through song, the school assembly routed via the gymnasium to the main entrance’s flag pole. The student body remained respectfully silent as the honor guard raised the U.S. and Tulalip flags while a trumpet rendition of ‘Reveille’ played.

“It was the first time we’ve ever been asked to do a flag raising ceremony here at Tulalip. It was a great honor,” said William McLean III, Veterans Coordinator, standing beside fellow veteran Rocky Renecker following the assembly. “For the students here, we hope today introduces them to the fact that flags mean something, they aren’t just pieces of cloth floating in the air. Both these flags are near and dear to our hearts and represent why we chose to serve in the military.”

For the hundreds of students that pass by the school’s flagpole every day, the Tulalip Tribes flag waving in the wind over Quil Ceda Tulalip Elementary serves as a subtle example of sovereignty in action.

ent show, craft making, a large outdoor market, and a fun for all ages carnival. Concluding the festival was the Twilight Grand Parade.

Young children stood with excitement on the sidewalk pavement, while their parents and elders watched contently from popup lawn chairs. During the evening spectacle, attendees watched a flotilla of close to 100 colorful floats, marching bands, bagpipers, drill teams, dancing horses, and other entries add to the merrymaking festivities. Tulalip was well-represented with a variety of themed displays throughout the parade, adding to the spectacle of stunning visuals and raucous sounds.

Tulalip Bay Fire and the police department lent the sirens of their emergency services vehicles to signal the parade’s start. Senior royalty Mark Brown and Pauline Williams rocked regal headwear as they were chauffeured down State Street, while Chairwoman Teri Gobin wore an always stylish cedar hat as she waved to adoring fans.

Beginning at 7:45pm, the parade lasted approximately 90-minutes, ending shortly after sunset. Unlike years past, there was no dazzling firework show to mark the parade’s end because of Marysville’s city-wide ban on fireworks.

Ross Fryberg Sr. and Jr. led the grand parade in a Tulalip Bay Fire truck.

Tulalip Senior Royalty named at Elder's luncheon

Mark Brown and Pauline Williams were crowned as King and Queen during the Luncheon

By Calvin Valdillez

In the Orca ballroom of the Tulalip Resort and Casino, elders representing many different tribal nations gathered on June 13 for an afternoon of gab, grub and gifts. An estimated 1,200 Indigenous wisdom keepers journeyed to Tulalip for the Tribe's popular annual Elder's Luncheon.

Laughter was shared throughout the event as Tulalip Board of Director Mel Sheldon provided witty jokes and tidbits while on emcee duty. Elders from near and far enjoyed each other's company for hours. Several vendor stations were set-up across the hall, in the Chinook ballrooms, selling a variety of items including beaded jewelry, blankets, artwork and accessories.

"We come here every year," exclaimed Kalispel tribal elder, Wilma Bowman. "We actually got here a day early and spent the night, we'll stay again tonight. I love this luncheon because they have vendors, very good food and this is my favorite tribal hotel. I just love how it's designed to represent their culture outside and in. There was a time where you couldn't do this because it wasn't a fast paced world. You could only really visit with neighboring tribes but now you can travel a long ways and visit with elders from other tribes."

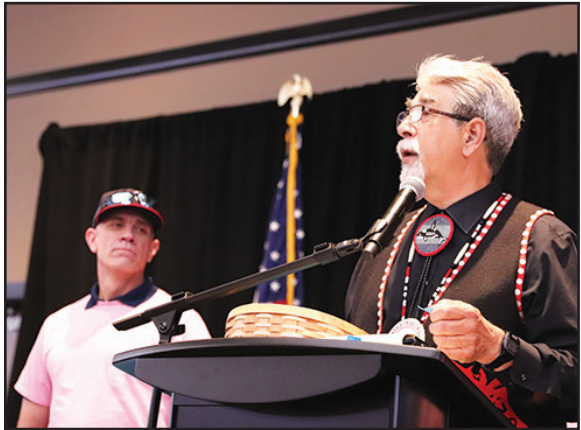

The elders were fed a delicious salmon lunch while they listened for their raffle ticket numbers to be called. This year, the Tribe raffled off a number of giveaway items including 32" & 55" TVs, KitchenAid mixers, cash, mini refrigerators, Keurig coffee makers and gift baskets donated by several Tulalip tribal and TGO departments.

The Marysville Strawberry Festival Tulalip Senior Royalty, Mark Brown and Pauline Williams, were crowned as King and Queen during the Luncheon. With their crowns held high and their sashes proudly on display, the couple happily accepted their naming and showcased their graceful, royal waves to their fellow elders.

"It's an honor," expressed Queen Pauline. "Especially because my mother was once up on that stage, in about 2001, 2002. Her name is Florence Gladys McKay and she received the same honor. I haven't lived here all my life. I left when I was about seventeen and ended up in Texas and met my husband. Now I've come full circle and came home. This luncheon is always great because you get to meet people from all over. We try to go to a few other luncheons too, at different tribes, Spokane and Coeur d'Alene."

After the grand prize, the 55" Smart TV, was gifted, the elders said their goodbyes, exchanged information and shared hugs. Many of the elders who were staying another night made plans for dinner and gaming after a fun afternoon at the luncheon.

"I think it's important for the elders to come together every year," said Elisha Stewart, Elders Service Case and Program Manager. "It seems like the only time our communities come together is because of a loss or tragedy. So coming together to celebrate them is important, their presence is good medicine and when they bring that to our community, it's priceless."

On the morning of June 17, the Tulalip Real Estate department, as well as volunteers from the Planning department, were hard at work cleaning up the Silver Village neighborhood. The clean-up is the department's second and biggest beautification project to date, where they perform basic maintenance upkeep such as landscaping and trash and debris removal at Tulalip housing developments.

"Today we're doing a much-needed clean-up to show the community that we care about the condition of the neighborhoods," said Larry Bergstrom, Interim Executive Director of Property Management. "We're cleaning up common areas where we know people need help with the grass and we're basically doing all the gutters along the street. We also provide large dumpsters and let the people know that they are going to be here, and that they're free to come load it up with anything they got in their house that they need to get rid of."

After a successful community clean up last year at the "Y-Site" neighborhood, the Real Estate department took on the bigger challenge at Silver Village and partnered with Tulalip Public Works, utilizing their mowers and weed whackers.

"These little things help," stated Desiree Michael, Asset and Real Estate Manager. "Making sure we don't have leaking oil, fluids, rusty metal and overgrown grass everywhere is a good start. We want to make sure that oil isn't seeping into the ground because that eventually seeps into the water supply for the salmon. We're really just doing our part, helping the environment because it needs to be done. It looks better, it's better for drainage and it's better for the development as a whole."

The Real Estate and Planning departments organized a lunchtime BBQ to feed the local residents who helped out with the clean-up project. Unfortunately, the picnic was only enjoyed amongst coworkers as the team received no volunteers or assistance that morning. The department was happy, however, that many people were using the dumpsters as well as placing large unwanted items on their curbside for the Real Estate department to pick up and deliver to the dump.

"We encouraged the residents to help but we haven't gotten any volunteers yet," Larry said. "But we'll be back on Friday (June 21) because this is a big site and hopefully we'll get more participation. We're really just hoping to instill a little more pride in the neighborhood for the people."

"I wish that the residents would come out and participate too," added Desiree. "We posted fliers, we knocked on doors, we tried to get them involved. It's Larry's goal to do these clean-ups at each of the developments, I just hope the residents will jump in, help us out and get involved in their neighborhoods."

Wonderful two weeks for Tulalip

We had so many events over the past two weeks it was wonderful to see all the travelers that made the trip to take part in the Bone Game; Pow-Wow; and Memorial for Bud Anderson who was an honorary tribal member, canoe races, salmon ceremony and elder's lunch. Every event there were vast people that attended these events.

The canoe races is a great event as it is unbelievable the numerous tribes that took part in this and thanks to Natasha Fryberg and her spouse for starting this wonderful event. I made it to the canoe races on Sunday and could not believe how many beautiful canoes were in the race as families came from all over Indian country with their children who seemed to enjoy our beautiful Tulalip Bay.

I was happy to see the June 15 paper with pictures of Kordelle Hammons and Kiley Likins who were honored as Graduates for 2019. As an elder I was happy to see that Kordelle received this award. He is my great grandson and granddaughters first cousin and since I first met him when he was probably in grade school he will always come up to me and give me a hug no matter where we are. This shows great respect for his elders. Congratulations Kordelle as I personally feel you deserve this honor.

Also, this week was the Elders/Seniors Lunch at the Orca Room and it was a great event thanks to Mel Sheldon the MC and the tribal staff and volunteers. Every person in the room seemed to have a wonderful time and the food was great.

The Salmon Ceremony and Strawberry Festival parade was also this week with the Senior King and Queen riding in the parade. They were also crowned by Carol Kapua on behalf of the Strawberry Festival Board at the elder's lunch.

With all these events happening this and last month we need to take a rest!!

Those people that planned these events should be proud of their work as it was a wonderful month for all of Tulalip.

Also, Thanks to the Board of Director for sponsoring these events.
