Community holiday spirit gives foster youth joyful Christmas

Article/photos by Brandi N. Montreuil

The Tulalip Foster Care Christmas Program had its largest caseload this year, with 218 Tulalip youth needing sponsorship for the holiday season.

This year the community shocked beda?chelh staff with their generosity. Every child needing sponsorship received donations. Some of the big items donated included iPods, bikes, TV's, and even an Xbox 360.

Each year, Tulalip beda?chelh staff asks community members to donate new unwrapped gifts or sponsor a child enrolled in a youth-inneed case. Children placed in foster care do not receive their monthly tribal per-capita, as other youth do, nor do the foster placement. To ensure that youth are not left out, staff at Tulalip beda?chelh created the gift giving program which, relies solely on donations from the community.

"I am just amazed and really proud of the generosity of our community," said beda?chelh office administrator, Tamara Brushert. "It has been chaotic and draining but I am happy and overwhelmed with the generosity. We were able to make Christmas happen for these kids."

The Foster Care Christmas Program, through community donations, was able to provide roughly $21,000 worth in items to foster care youth.

Right: More than 500 items were donated to the beda?chelh Foster Care Christmas Program ensuring that more than 200 youth will have more than 3 gifts to open on Christmas this year.

Geoduck industry fighting China's shellfish-import ban

Washington geoduck farmers and harvesters have turned to politicians to help overturn a Chinese shellfishimport ban that's all but shut down the local industry.

By Jay Greene, December 14, 2013 the Seattle Times

Washington geoduck harvesters and government officials, including Gov. Jay Inslee, are scrambling to overturn China's decision to ban some shellfish exports from the Pacific Northwest.

The ban has brought the geoduck industry here to a virtual halt.

Fish inspectors in China notified the U.S. Embassy on Dec. 3 that China was tentatively suspending imports of geoduck and other "double-shell aquatic animals," such as oysters, because they found high levels of paralytic shellfish poisoning, or PSP, in a Nov. 21 shipment of geoducks.

PSP is a biotoxin produced by algae that shellfish eat and, in humans, in high levels it can lead to severe illness and even death.

KUOW first reported news of the ban.

The ban is a particularly nettlesome problem in Washington because China accounts for about 90 percent of geoduck exports from the state. And fisheries in the state harvest and farm 5.5 million to 7 million pounds of geoduck annually, according to Taylor Shellfish Farms, one of the state's largest geoduck providers. Those companies generally sell geoduck, which is a burrowing clam, for between $7 and $25 a pound.

The ban also affects Alaskan shellfish.

Local fish companies, though, are struggling to understand the ban because testing by the Washington State Department of Health in the area where the geoduck shipments originated found PSP levels well below internationally accepted limits

"We've gone back and looked at all records — they show results way below any human-health concern," Donn Moyer, a health-department spokesman, said Saturday. "We don't have any evidence or information whatsoever about any high levels of PSP in any shellfish."

Geoduck harvesters believe the Chinese inspectors applied a standard for the level of toxicity that is well below what is considered safe for humans.

"The numbers I saw (that Chinese inspectors used) are just plain ridiculous," said Tony Forsman, general manager of Suquamish Seafoods, a business run by the Suquamish Tribe.

To compound the challenge, communication from the Chinese government has been scant. State regulators and fishery executives say they have heard nothing more from the Chinese since the Dec. 3 notification. Press officials from the Chinese embassy in Washington didn't respond to an email query Saturday.

That's led the industry to turn to political leaders to resolve the issue. On Friday, the governor and Commissioner of Public Lands Peter Goldmark sent a letter to the heads of the Food and Drug Administration and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration asking them to engage in "direct interaction with the Chinese government" to determine the status of the ban and to gather information about the Chinese inspection.

In the meantime, local geoduck harvesters and farmers are curtailing operations. Suquamish Seafoods, which sends all of its geoduck, between $2 million and $3 million a year, to China, has idled its 24 divers.

"This is unprecedented," Forsman. "The tribe really depends on it."

Taylor Shellfish Farms, which sells some geoduck domestically, has had to reduce hours for its workers. And if the Chinese ban continues much longer, prices for geoduck sold domestically will drop because of a market glut.

"That may have an impact on domestic prices," said Bill Dewey, Taylor's director of public policy and communications.

June Robinson appointed to state House seat

County Council members say each of the three women would have been good choices for the position.

June Robinson

By Jerry Cornfield, The Herald

EVERETT — June Robinson of Everett became Snohomish County's newest member of the state House of Representatives on Monday.

The Snohomish County Council voted unanimously to appoint Robinson, a Democrat, to replace Rep. John McCoy who became a state senator last month.

She took the oath of office immediately after the council's decision.

"I am very excited," she said. "I will go there and work hard to serve the people of the 38th Legislative District."

The appointment will last until she or another candidate is certified as the winner in the 2014 general election.

Robinson's selection had been anticipated since she emerged from a pack of seven candidates as the top choice of the party on Dec. 10.

That night she finished ahead of Jennifer Smolen of Marysville and Deborah Parker of Tulalip in the final round of balloting by the district's precinct committee officers.

County Council members interviewed the three nominees before voting 5-0 to install Robinson in the $42,106-a-year job representing residents in Everett, Tulalip and a slice of Marysville.

Smolen, an Iraq war veteran, worked as an aide for state Sen. Steve Hobbs in 2011 and then for Snohomish County Councilwoman Stephanie Wright in late 2011 and early 2012.

Parker is the elected vice chairwoman of the Tulalip Tribes. She formerly worked as legislative policy analyst for the tribes.

Republican Councilman John Koster, a former state lawmaker, praised the talents of the three women, calling them "the best group of people we've ever interviewed" for a political appointment.

"This was probably one of the most difficult decisions this council has had," he said.

Councilman Brian Sullivan, a Democrat and another onetime legislator, described the trio as an "an all-star cast."

And Councilman Dave Somers, also a Democrat, said the three women are shining examples of public service and each would be a star in the Legislature.

Robinson has spent her career involved in programs dealing with human services and community health care. She told the council she would like to serve on House committees that deal with those issues.

She's worked as a program manager for King County Public Health since 2012 and said she'll take a leave of absence when the Legislature begins its 60-day regular session in January.

She formerly served as executive director of the Housing Consortium of Everett and Snohomish County which focuses on expanding affordable housing in the community.

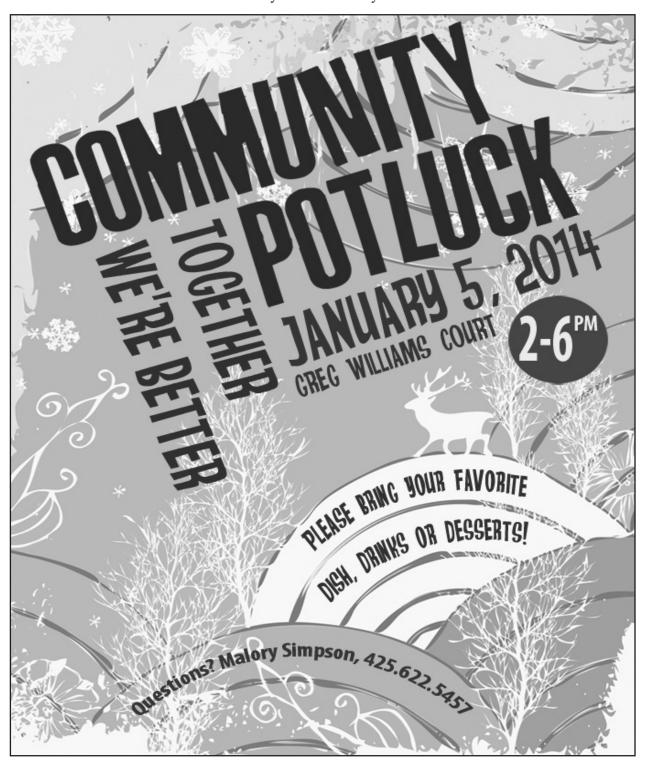

She also is a member of the city of Everett's Salary Commission and its Human Needs Committee. And she is on the steering committee of the Northwest Neighborhood Association.

Robinson ran unsuccessfully for Everett City Council in 2011 and 2012. She had been seeking an open seat on the council until Sen. Nick Harper resigned in early November.

When it seemed clear either McCoy or state Rep. Mike Sells, D-Everett, would be chosen to fill Harper's seat, she ended her council pursuit to focus on securing whichever seat opened. She said a number of people encouraged her to do so, including House Speaker Frank Chopp, D-Seattle.

Robinson is married and has two sons who are both in college.

Tulalip Tribal Court to publish names on warrant list in February 2014

Submitted by Wendy Church, Tulalip Tribal Court Director

In the first week of February 2014, the Tribal Court will publish in the See-Yaht-Sub the names of Tribal members who are on the active warrant list by authority of Tulalip Tribal Resolution 2011-504.

There are over 300+ warrants which burdens and is very costly to the police and judicial system, thus, the Court at this time is giving notice and the opportunity to Tribal members who live on the Tulalip Reservation and who have an old warrant to come in and quash that warrant so that you can get a new Court hearing date— before we publish your name in the See-Yaht-Sub in February 2014.

Warrants are issued because you failed to appear at your hearing, or there was a criminal complaint filed against you, also if you have failed to comply with a court order, such as having a probation violation or a missed mandatory uranalysis. You may be able to quash an old warrant and get a new Court hearing date if you are a Tribal member and you have a warrant for your arrest on the Tulalip Reservation.

For first time offenders second time (sometimes offenders), your warrant quash will cost you nothing. If you are a repeat offender, the judge may levy a fee for you to quash your warrant, anywhere from $25 to $75 dollars. The police, prosecution, and probation are then notified that you came to the court to quash your warrant. It is advised to please keep your warrant quash paperwork on you for at least two weeks after it is quashed.

The tribal court encourages you to come in to quash your warrant. It shows you are taking care of business and makes a good impression on the judge.

Please visit the Tribal Court to quash your warrant during these times:

Tuesdays, from 8:30 a.m.to 09:30 a.m., and Fridays, from 10:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m.

If you have questions regarding warrant quashes, you can call the Tribal Court Clerk at 360 / 716-4773.

Farewell to a veteran

Article/photos by Brandi N. Montreuil, Tulalip News

"He wasn't just a cop he was a veteran. And veterans are important." This was the idea behind Tulalip tribal veteran Andy James's call to Washington State Trooper Lt. E. J. Swainson.

As a Marine veteran of the Vietnam conflict, James understands the void that is left behind when a fellow brother-in-arms passes away, whether it be from combat or not. Although James did not know Washington State Trooper Sean M. O'Connell personally, he knows the pain of losing a veteran and the need for a final salute.

On Thursday, May 16 of this year, an over-sized truck hit a critical section on the Interstate 5 Bridge that spans over the Skagit River, causing it to collapse into the river, taking three vehicles with it. Following the collapse, temporary detour routes were established north and southbound, creating a traffic nightmare for residents and travelers. During a check of back-up traffic on May 31, O'Connell, a Washington State trooper of 16 years, was hit by a box truck and thrown from his motorcycle, critically injuring him and ending his watch. He left behind a wife, two young children, and countless law enforcement and military family.

"I knew I wasn't going to be able to attend the service or be a part of the service, but there was something that needed to be done for him as a veteran", said James, who is also a Tulalip police officer. "Some of us survive our tour and come home only to pass away at home. Doesn't matter the circumstances when a veteran passes away, all of us surviving feel it."

As a way of honoring their fellow veteran who participated in the liberation of Kuwait during Operation Desert Storm, a handful of Tulalip veterans held a traditional tribal blessing and prayer at the bridge on December 11, just five days after the bridge was formally dedicated in O'Connell's honor. In attendance were O'Connell's fellow WSP troopers from District 7, Captain J.R. Sass and Lt. E.J. Swainson.

"This is a blessing for you as well as for Sean's family," James told the troopers before preparing to burn sage that is traditionally used to cleanse a grieving heart. A blessing was also performed for travelers who will use the new temporary bridge.

"This is about respect for your fellow brother. I am just here as a veteran to salute a fallen solider and say farewell," said Tulalip Vietnam conflict veteran, Richard Muir Jr., who said a prayer for O'Connell and blessed the bridge.

Others in attendance included Tulalip tribal elder Clarissa Johnny who also said a prayer for O'Connell's family. Before the blessing Johnny remarked that this was the first time traveling over the bridge since the collapse. "It is kind of scary going over, knowing what happened. You don't ever think that a bridge is going to collapse."

"I am glad that we were able to do this," remarked WSP Lt. E.J. Swainson after the ceremony. "This was a perfect day to hold this and celebrate his life, we appreciate the opportunity to do this and it means a lot."

During the ceremony sage was burned to cleanse grieving hearts.

Tulalip tribal veterans offered a prayer and song during the ceremony.

Article and photos by Andrew Gobin

Tulalip Bay Fire Department brought a little Christmas cheer to the neighborhoods of Tulalip. A parade of the department's two fire engines and ambulance featured Santa riding along on an engine, jumping off to pass out hugs and candy canes to kids, from one to ninety-two, all the while trumpeting horns and blasting sirens to let people know that Santa had come to town.

Kids and their families lined the streets on December 14th and 15th as Santa rolled through with his firefighting elves. The children's faces lit up as soon as they saw him, or maybe that was from all the lights decorating the fire engines. Santa and his elves joined families for a chorus of Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer and passing motorists didn't seem to mind Santa parading down the street. In fact many passing cars stopped to join the holiday festivities.

The Holiday Santa Run started at 5:00 p.m. each day and lasted five hours. Santa and his elves collected food and monetary donations for the Tulalip Food Bank, filling the ambulance with donations over the course of the weekend.

To view more photos of Santa visiting children and their families, please visit tulalipnews. com, or see our new facebook page; search Tulalip News.

Stranger Danger!

Tulalip Quil Ceda students complete RadKIDS program

Article and photos by Andrew Gobin

Students run from the big man in a bright red suit. No, it isn't Santa Clause, it's a stranger. Students of the radKIDS program at Tulalip Quil Ceda Elementary graduated on December 16th, taking turns displaying their defensive skills on Tulalip Police Officer Clayton Horne who wore a bright red padded suit.

The radKIDS program is an eight session program that teaches kids all about stranger danger as well as what to do about bullies. For the first part of the graduation, program instructors Rochelle Lubbers and Razi Liptich had the students circled up in the gymnasium shouting "STOP!" or "NO!" while reviewing their defensive moves like elbowing, toe stomping, kneeing, and kicking.

As the teachers wrapped up the review and explained to parents about the program, the kids suited up in minor padding.

"RadKIDS has gained attention nationally, being noted in several attempted abductions where the child was able to escape," said Rochelle Lubbers, emergency management coordinator for the Tulalip Tribes.

For the final part of their graduation they were approached by officer Horne in the red suit as he tried to abduct them. The students had to choose their defensive move, then escape to tell an adult.

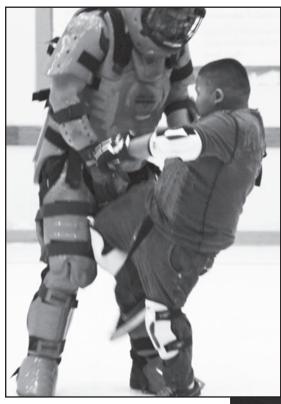

Grace Davis, now a radKIDS graduate, said, "I liked the program. I learned how to get away and how to tell if someone is a threat."

Students fingerprinted their certificates as they received them, which also had a recent photo printed on them. The certificates are now important profiles for authorities, making children easily identifiable. If anything were to happen to a child, the parents would be readily prepared with recent information to give to the authorities.

My struggle inside

I'm at a breaking point in my life, It's like a major struggle inside, I've got nothing left to lose, But yet I'm trying my hardest to decide, Whether to chose wrong or right, It's gotta be something going on in my head, That keeps me up late at night, Struggles with trusting evil little demons, All I wish for, is to finally have a wife to be my light, If I'm to take out these demons, I'm really in for a bloody fight,

So it's time to take flight, Or stand like a man and fight for my life, It's an unseen battle for survival, Going on within, I know where this dangerous game will take me, Over the edge into the depths of darkness to no end, So I know I've gotta go and do this all on my own, Damn I hate this feeling of facing life all alone, Got no one to turn to, just these bricks and bars I'm calling home. I know that I'm pretty strong, so I'm hard to break, That's one thing that everyone can say, Is that I know how to separate the real from the fake, It's just like an endless game of how much one can take, Who's the one who can handle the most pain, It's an endless game that no one can ever win, Just another message that I wanna try and send, It sucks when reality goes and really starts to settle in, I don't know which way that I should go, Or where I should begin, should I just cut my losses, And try to start life over once again,

It's gotta be the hardest thing
to ever try to do
To try and start over from inside here
Locked up inside the pen.

General Manager's Report

To Whom It May Concern:

As part of our ongoing efforts to increase efficiency and effectiveness, beginning on January 2nd, all drug and alcohol testing for Tulalip Tribal Court, Family Services, Beda?chelh will be centralized and conducted by our Central Drug and Alcohol Testing Program (CDATP). All color line testing will be conducted from 8:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. at Family Services Building C (2821 Mission Hill Road).

Although this may initially seem inconvenient, centralized drug testing has several benefits. It will reduce the number of duplicate tests for clients who are participating in more than one program. Those on the color line, whether they are involved in a single program or all three, will have a single call-in line, 360-716-4085. Lastly, from an advocate's standpoint, it reduces the potential interaction between perpetrators and victims who may be utilizing the same tribal resources.

Another benefit we anticipate is better rates from the test processing facility. A central department will perform tests at a greater volume than four individual departments will, giving us greater bargaining power when negotiating contracts.

The final benefit of centralized testing is the effect it will have on our staff, clientele and day to day operations. When our counselors, court professionals and case managers take time out of their day to conduct tests, or wait for clients to show up for testing, they are not fulfilling their primary missions, to help our children, families and community live healthy and fulfilling lives. This change will help us operate more efficiently and make the best possible use of all of our resources.

Change is often uncomfortable and inconvenient. Now, and in the future, we will be doing our best to inform you of the changes that are coming, and the reasons behind them. I hope that you can support our decisions as together we create a healthy and culturally vibrant community.

Sincerely, Misty Napeahi, Deputy GM
