

Kanoe Williams is latest homegrown tribal member to join local police force

By Micheal Rios

It's a common occurrence for American children, especially young boys, to dream of one day becoming a police officer, fire firefighter or army soldier. Whether its socialization from Saturday morning cartoons or play fighting with their prized action figures, there typically

'New team, same dominance' for Tulalip's Jacynta Myles

By Micheal Rios

She's too humble to admit she's a dominating low post player on the basketball court. Yet anyone who has been following Jacynta Myles' high school career knows it's a simple truth. She's too big, too strong...simply too much to handle one-on-one for any Northwest 1B high school program. And now playing for Lummi Nation, she's looking to make one last playoff run before her high school days are over.

“When we have Tulalip tribal members hear the call to serve their own people by becoming officers, we are not only embracing our sovereignty but creating a better community.”

comes a point where a child's hero worship manifests itself into visualizing a future self where they are the actual hero. That may look like a brave police officer catching bad guys, a fearless firefighter running into a blazing fire to save people, or a valiant soldier fighting to defend freedom and democracy.

For some, this calling to be a hero who protects and serves their community never fades. Such is the case with homegrown Tulalip tribal member Kanoe Williams. He recently returned from a lengthy stay in New Mexico where he attended and graduated from the U.S. Indian Police Academy.

The 29-year-old Kanoe becomes the latest in a long, proud history of tribal members who chose to wear the Tulalip Police Department shield. He sat down with Tulalip News staff to reflect on his journey to this point and what he hopes the future holds for him in law enforcement.

What inspired you to join TPD?

“My inspiration to become a Tulalip police officer is a passion to serve my community. The thought first came to me when I was 24, but I knew I wasn't ready then to take on this role. Now, I'm a little older, more mature, and willing to take on this responsibility to protect and serve our people.”

Describe the process to become a tribal police officer.

“First things first, you gotta have the courage to apply and put yourself through a series of tests. A polygraph to test your honesty and integrity, a medical to test physical capableness and general fitness, and a series of interviews to make sure you're a good fit to join Tulalip police.

After passing those required tests, then it's on to police academy where you learn the basics of the law and other essential skills for successful police work. Attending academy was the longest I'd ever been off the Reservation, so there was an adjustment period, but I knew it was all part of the process to create a better future for myself, my family, and my Tribe.”

What kind of impact do you hope to make in the community?

“A positive one, that's for sure. What that may look like will vary from person to person and family to family. But in general, I want our people to feel safe and confident that when they need police assistance that we have their best interest at heart, always. By giving our people the respect and empathy they deserve, I hope to earn their trust as an officer who knows what they are doing and is fair in enforcing the law to everyone.

Looking even further in the future, I hope to become a training sergeant who is able to recruit more of our tribal members into joining and give them the confidence to do this job well.”

It's a fascinating political and social climate to become a cop, especially when considering social media. Did any of this play a role in your decision?

“It's funny because if you just looked at the news and social media you might wonder why anyone would want to become a cop today. However, most the time, when you see first responders around large groups of kids like a school, the Boys and Girls Club, or the Youth Center, the interactions are always positive. The younger kids will often share how they want to become a police officer or firefighter. That's empowering.

To pursue and accept a role to serve your community is empowering as well. And something I want do so that our next generation continues to dream of becoming heroes and choosing careers where they serve others instead of only themselves. Detering and preventing crime may not be glamorous to everyone, but knowing those we love and care about are safe is the ultimate reward.”

Why is it important for Tulalip to have representation in its police force?

“There are many tribes that don't have their own police force. They are instead policed by outside agencies and county police who don't understand what its like for our people who live on a reservation. When we have Tulalip tribal members hear the call to serve their own people by becoming officers, we are not only embracing our sovereignty but creating a better community.

Growing up on the reservation, we see and hear things that are very different from outside communities. Our experiences make us more compassionate and understanding because we know there all different kinds of traumas at work and those traumas can be healed in a variety of ways. Through community outreach and creating networks with all the departments that want to make our people healthy, our police department actively works with our people, not against them.

In my short time in the department I've witnessed firsthand how much our officers, tribal and non-tribal, respect and care for our Tulalip community. I've also been hearing the stories of past tribal members who built the police department into what it is today. That's a legacy I intend to build upon for all of us.”

During her freshman and sophomore years, Jacynta was a foundational player for Tulalip's Heritage High School. She was a walking double-double even while still adjusting to her still growing, powerful physique. Then the pandemic hit. She managed to still dazzle her opponents with monster stat lines in her junior year while wearing a Heritage Hawks jersey. But going into her senior season, she was forced to make a change.

A combination of factors, largely due to the ongoing pandemic, led to Heritage sports being temporarily disbanded. The athletes were granted permission to continue playing sports at other high schools. Most chose programs in Marysville, but not Jacynta. The 18-year-old culture bearer refused to play for a non-Native basketball team. So what did she do? Routinely drive herself from Tulalip, all the way up to Lummi, in order to gain eligibility, that's what.

"I really hoped we could've had a basketball season at Heritage for my senior year, but it wasn't meant to be," reflected Jacynta. "I love being Native American and representing our culture through sports, especially basketball. Our crowds are always so passionate and really enjoy seeing us play. So when that all got cancelled, my choices were to play for a school that doesn't really represent us or play for our on-court rival, Lummi. It was a no brainer for me. I chose the culture."

Long-time rivals, on the court anyway, Lummi Nation hoops welcomed the towering Jacynta with open arms. Sure, there was an adjustment period, more so because the guard heavy BlackHawks weren't used to playing with a truly talented post player before. However, once both player and team got used to one another the results spoke for themselves.

Fueled by Jacynta's presence in the paint anchoring their defense and her low post dominance on offense, Lummi reeled off one W after another. Coach Krista Mahle explained by adding Jacynta to the team, her guards were able to play a much more up-tempo style. Four wings who can all dribble, pass and shoot typically share the court with Jacynta.

"Jacynta has been a game changer for us," said Coach Krista. "She's been a leader for my girls and helped them really develop their games. We've been so happy to have a player of her caliber on our team."

Lummi's new style of play with Jacynta at the center spot created havoc for their opponent's coaches. Do they sell out to slow down the biggest girl on the court or focus on the perimeter ball handlers and let Jacynta have her way in the post? Neither strategy worked particularly well.

The BlackHawks dominated the regular season with a league best 7-1 record. After getting a first round bye, they hosted the Darrington Loggers in a second round playoff matchup on February 5th. The game was the first home game all season that Lummi Nation allowed fans in the stands. A decent sized crowd showed up, including a handful of Tulalip families, to cheer on the all-Native BlackHawks team.

They made quick work of the Loggers who were clearly outmatched in all facets of the game. Jacynta barely broke a sweat while filling the box score. Lummi gave their excited crowd what they came to see, a 54-39 W.

"It's been a really fun season, especially having teammates who help me be the best post player I can be, which just makes the wins that much sweeter," said Jacynta post-game. "My teammates and coach have really embraced me. Now, together, we hope to make a deep playoff run. Personally, I've never been to State before, so that's my goal. How amazing would that be to finally make it happen in my senior year?"

Next up for Jacynta and her Lummi BlackHawks is a matchup with Grace Academy on Thursday, February 10, with a 6:00 p.m. tipoff.

Tribal teens are growing through Youth Night

By Shaelyn Hood

More often than not parents are trying to find programs and groups that are going to help uplift their children, build life skills, and let them hang with kids their age in a safe place. If you have a child between 6-12 grade, the Education Division's Youth Night might be the place for you.

Much like other gatherings, the Covid-19 pandemic has made it difficult for people to come together, and celebrate life in all its form. A social group that is heavily dependent on the voices of others, is youth. Specifically, when talking about teenagers. These years of their life are so important, because they are learning about who they are and what they want to be. They're becoming less reliant on their parents for daily tasks, and building habits of their own.

According to a 2020 survey by UNICEF, because of Covid-19, more teenagers in the U.S. are suffering from anxiety and depression, 46% of kids have less motivation to do activities they used to do, and 73% felt they needed help concerning their mental and/or physical health. Without the skills that are learned from having a healthy routine, socializing with others, and doing daily tasks like working and going to school, it has hurt teenagers in a way that could be detrimental to how they start their adult life.

As parents and community leaders, there is little to what can be controlled in a global pandemic. But as things have started to re-open, departments like the Education Division have been trying their best to seize the moment.

Primary leader for the Youth Night events, Adiya Jones-Smith said, "The first couple weeks we just want to focus on team building, and then we'll get more into interpersonal communication skills. Lastly, we want to target safe thoughts and get them outside their comfort zone, and express how they may be feeling or what they may be going through. Because who knows, they might be able to relate to one another."

She went on to talk about how it's important because these are activities and skills that kids don't normally get to experience in school. Since it is at the Youth Center, it is a perfect time to get them out of the house, and keep them engaged outside of school.

When speaking with one of the tribal youth who attended the event, she said, "Sometimes I'm bored after school. I come here once in a while. I've made more friends and I get to have more stuff to do."

Sometimes, that's all a child needs; time spent with friends, and an area to decompress.

Youth Night takes place every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday from 3:30-4:30 PM, at the Don Hatch Youth Center. During the event, food and snacks are supplied by Uppy's Kitchen. Other than the program's organized activities, kids can hang out, socialize with one another, and play in the gym with basketballs, volleyballs, etc.

Events like this have the ability to build our adolescents, by reducing risky behaviors, helping academic development, and promoting overall physical and mental health. It is available for any tribal youth from 6th-12th grade, and there is no sign-up necessary. If you would like more information about Youth Night, please contact Adiya Jones-Smith at adiyajones@tulaliptribes-nsn.gov.

Below that, in a large white circle, is the phrase "YOU'RE THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD". The words "YOUTH NIGHT" are written in large, colorful, block letters. At the bottom, there are colorful silhouettes of people dancing. Text at the bottom of the poster says: "Join us for fun Team Building skills, including communication activities, problem solving & more!!! Start date: 2-7-22 Mon-Wed 3:30-4:30 P.M. Notice of Construction and Water System Improvements

Segment 9, Tulalip Water Pipeline

The Tulalip Utilities has been working hard on the next Segment 9 of the Tulalip Water Pipeline to bring water from Quil Ceda Village to the core of the Reservation. Segment 9 of the Tulalip Water Pipeline will consist of approximately 15,000 linear feet of 18 inch and 24 inches diameter pipeline stretching from Quil Ceda Village to Turk Drive, a 400,000 gallon water storage reservoir, and a water booster pumping station as shown on Figure 1. In addition to the water system improvements the Tulalip Utilities will also be installing conduits for future fiberoptic broad band service along the pipeline route. Much of the pipeline and broad band conduits will be constructed along 92nd Street and the Tulalip Utilities wants to inform the residents what to expect.

What Can Residents Expect from Construction: The Tulalip Water Pipeline construction will start at Turk Drive and be installed easterly along 92nd Street within the road prism. During working hours, the Contractor (Reece Construction) is required to maintain single lane vehicle access with traffic control (flaggers) and during non-working hours two lane vehicle access. The Contractor shall also install erosion control measures to prevent silt from leaving the construction area during wet weather conditions.

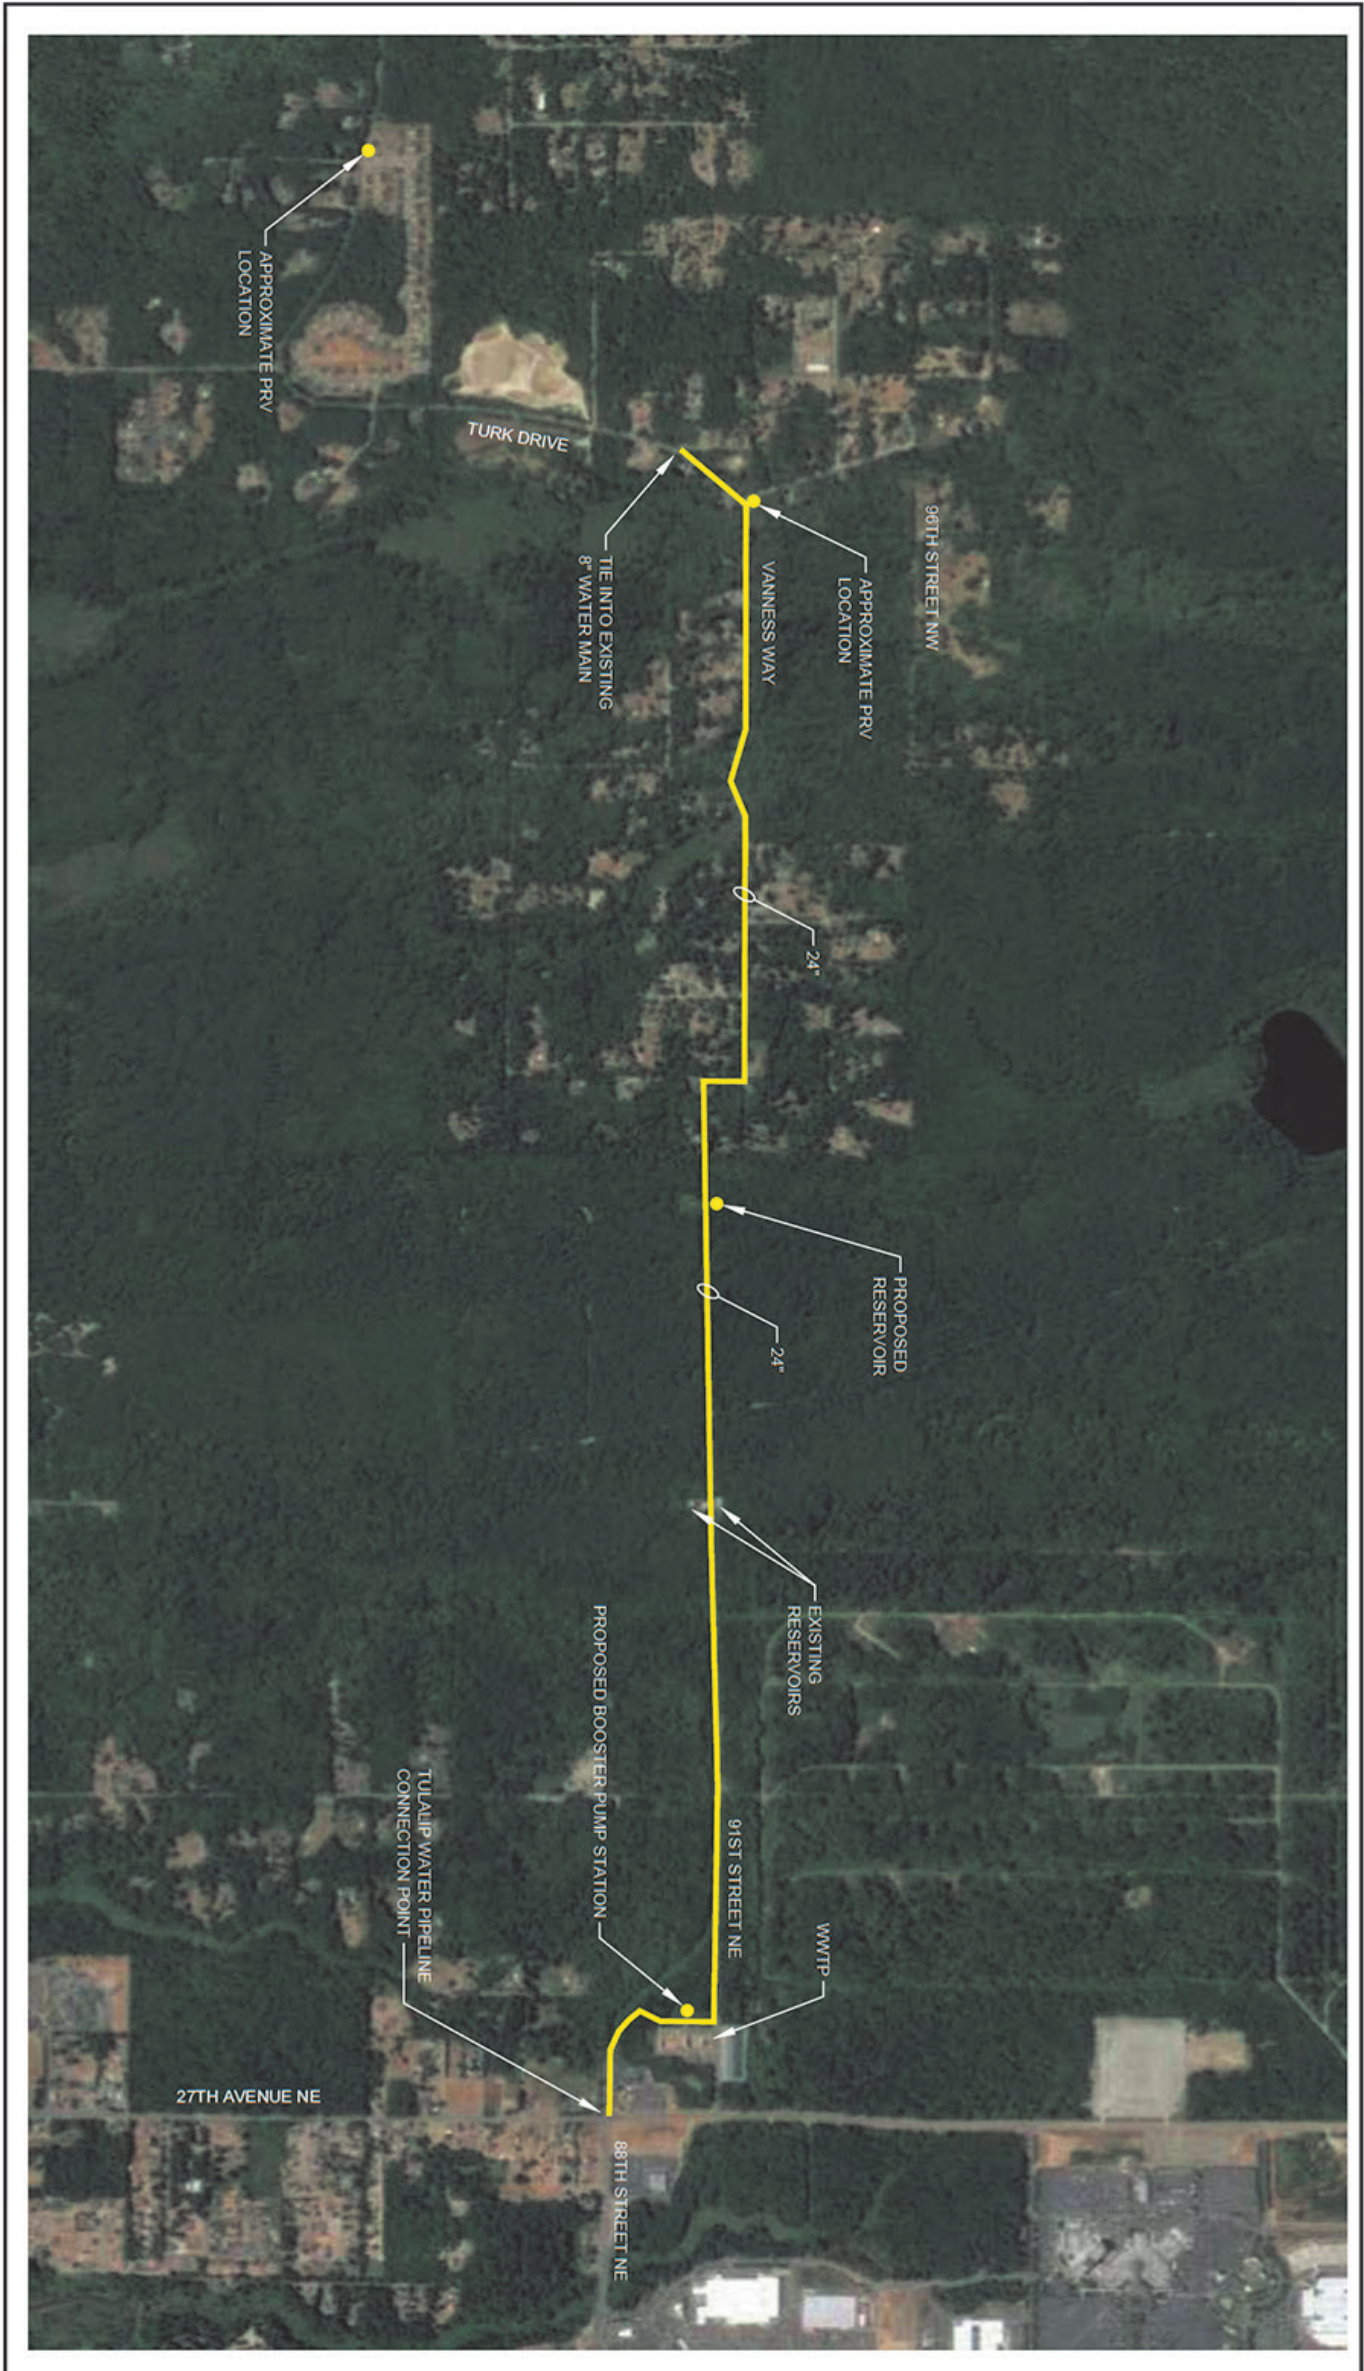

Benefits for Residents: The Tulalip Utilities will be installing fire hydrants along 92nd Street which will be connected to the new 400,000 gallon water reservoir. The new hydrants will be able to provide fire supply at more than 1000 gallons per minute. 92nd Street will receive a new graded road surface using crushed surfacing top course rock over the entire length of the road to Turk Drive.

When Will Construction Start and for How Long: It is anticipated that the Contractor will start actively installing the pipeline beginning as soon as the end of February but may be delivering pipeline in the middle of February. It is estimated that once the Contractor begins pipeline installation it will take approximately 8-10 weeks to finish construction along 92nd Street. Prior to pipe installation the Contractor will be installing erosion control measures such as silt fence to protect the environment. The Contractor will also be working east of 92nd for several months after pipeline installation on 92nd is completed.

What Will the Hours of Operation Be: The Contractor is anticipating working approximately 8 hour per days or 40 hours per week starting as soon as 7:00 AM. The Contractor has the option of requesting four 10 hour days but would need to get approval by the Tulalip Utilities.
