Affiliated Tribes of Northwest Indians holds annual conference at Tulalip Resort Casino

By Micheal Rios

In 1953, a group of visionary tribal leaders in the Northwest formed the Affiliated Tribes of Northwest Indians (ATNI), and dedicated it to tribal sovereignty and self-determination. Among those founding leaders included Sebastian Williams, who served on the first ever rendition of Tulalip Board of Directors. Today, Sebastian's hard work and reassuring resolve live on in the thriving government of his people and the steadfast, collaborative mission of the organization he helped to start.

ATNI is a nonprofit organization representing 57 Northwest tribal governments from Oregon, Idaho, Washington, southeast Alaska, Northern California and Western Montana. Its purpose is to: provide a forum for sharing information on matters of interest to its member Tribes, develop consensus on matters of mutual importance, assist member Tribes in their governmental and programmatic development consistent with their goals for self-determination and self-sufficiency and provide for effective public relations and education program with the non-Native communities.

The spirit of self-determination and self-sufficiency was embraced by hundreds of Native American citizens from all across the region who journeyed to Tulalip to attend the 2022 ATNI annual conference. Hosted by the Tulalip Tribes, the four-day conference was held September 18th – 22nd at the Resort Casino

“Since founding ATNI, all of the Tribes of the Northwest come together to convene and conference in order to bring out the issues they feel are important at the time,” said ATNI board secretary Jeanie Louie (Coeur d’Alene). “Our annual conference is where members convene for discussion, presentations and the work of the committees in regard to policy, legislation and the future of Indian Country in the Northwest.”

Through its conferences, forums, networks and alliances, it is the intent of ATNI to represent and advocate for the interests of its member Tribes to national organizations and the federal government. For four straight days, the representation of local Tribal interests echoed in the Orca ballroom, conference rooms, and adjoining walkway of the Resort Casino.

The reservation’s gem of a Resort provided many oohs and awes by conference attendees who took in the AAA certified Four Diamond luxury and accommodations for the very first time. That thought wasn’t lost on Tulalip board of director Mel Sheldon.

“It’s important for our Tulalip membership to recognize that we are one of the leading Tribes in the five-state region. When members of other Tribes come here and see our gaming properties, our Hibulb Cultural Center, our government building and all the natural splendor we have to offer, I think they are not only impressed, but they leave wishing their Tribe could emulate the sustained culture and gaming success that we’re fortunate to have,” said Mel, who also serves as ATNI 1st Vice President.

“To be the first Tulalip tribal member to serve on the ATNI executive board since Sebastian Williams is extremely humbling,” he continued. “Organizations like ATNI serve to unify the voices for all Tribes in the area. One collective voice, made up of 50 Tribes in the region, with a common goal is really much stronger than a bunch of individual voices that can be pitted against one another in the political realm. When we speak as one, the powers that be in Olympia, or Washington, D.C. for that matter, are forced to listen to our collective voice.”

Amongst the hefty four-day schedule were several breakout sessions or workshops led by Tulalip tribal members. From government affairs topics and expanding treaty rights to continuing education and passing legislation in pursuit of boarding school justice, Tulalip left an imprint at this year’s conference. Not to mention the number of local Tulalip artists, like Deshawn Joseph and Lance Taylor, who set up as independent vendors to sell their goods and network with leaders throughout Indian County.

By Calvin Valdillez

During the week of September 19, ATNI held their annual conference at the Tulalip Resort Casino. Following the second day of presentations and workshops, dozens of Northwest tribal leaders visited the Hibulb Cultural Center to learn about the Tulalip way of life.

The guests were treated to a delicious salmon bake dinner and a glimpse into the culture of the sduhubš people, complete with traditional songs and dances. The ATNI leaders also had the chance to tour the entire cultural museum to end the evening.

Dominic and Peyton receive Blue Line Bears in remembrance of their father, Officer Charlie Cortez

By Calvin Valdillez; Photos courtesy of Blue Line Bears and Paula Cortez

It has been nearly two years since fallen Tulalip Fish and Wildlife Officer Charlie Cortez was pronounced lost at sea while in the line of duty. His absence is still felt amongst the nation of Tulalip, as his bright smile lit up any room that he stepped in. Countless friends and family members often take the time to honor and remember the man who dedicated his life to protecting and serving his people, ensuring that his memory will live on throughout both the tribal and law enforcement communities for generations to come.

On Friday September 23, a non-profit known as Blue Line Bears paid a visit to the Tulalip reservation to present heartfelt and customized mementos to Charlie's children, Dominic and Peyton.

According to their official website, "Blue Line Bears is a nonprofit organization with the goal of helping the children of fallen law enforcement officers cope with the devastating loss of a parent. Blue Line Bears is the creation of the 14-year-old daughter of a police officer whose goal is to help the children of fallen officers through the difficult loss of their parent. Children of law enforcement officers grow up realizing that their parent's life is at risk every day they go to work. Add to that the fact that there is much public ridicule of law enforcement officers, and deaths in the line of duty are sudden, shocking and violent. With all of this in mind, Blue Line Bears will not only provide a lasting keepsake to help keep the officer's memory alive but will also help their child to see that there are caring individuals who respect and appreciate men and women in uniform. Children of officers killed in the line of duty are oftentimes young, perhaps too young to remember the parent who died. For those children, a bear from Blue Line Bears will provide a tangible reminder that their loved one will always be with them."

The stuffed teddy bears are designed from the uniforms of the fallen officer and is adorned with the officer's badges, patches and ranking stripes. In a photo that shows both Peyton and Dominic clutching their new bears closely, you can make out the customizations made in Charlie's honor including his end of watch date, the Tulalip Police Department patches, as well as a badge that reads Cortez across the center.

The Blue Line Bears hand delivered the teddy bears to Dominic and Peyton at the Tulalip Marina, next to Charlie's memorial wall and just yards away from the new Charlie Joe Cortez Marina Building, that was recently dedicated in his memory. In the summer of 2021, a motorcycle procession traveled the length of the Tulalip reservation to pay tribute to Charlie in a project called End of Watch – A ride to remember. The organizers of the nationwide project created a custom motorcycle with Charlie's name, bio, police department and end of watch date, that was driven across the country. The motorcycle was brought out once more to Tulalip for this special occasion, providing the opportunity for Charlie's loved ones and fellow TPD officers to take a photo alongside the bike during the Blue Line Bears' gifting ceremony.

Following the special day of honor, Charlie's mother Paula Cortez said in a Facebook post,

"Back in January I was looking through my packets of information from Washington D.C. Police Week. I came across the Blue Line Bears brochure, and I noticed that they make the bears out of the fallen officer's uniform for the officer's survivors. I contacted them by e-mail with my inquiry on how to order bears for Charlie's children. They returned my e-mail right away and they remembered Charlie's tragic story. They do the bears at no cost for the family. The delivery of the bears was yesterday at the Tulalip Marina. A wonderful addition to the day was a visit from Allison McCarter and the Harley Davidson bike dedicated in honor of Charlie for anyone who wanted to see it. Once again, thank you all for making the day special and honorable, and thank you Jobey Tom Williams for the beautiful closing song and blessings."

Tawnya Stout, Dominic and Peyton's mother, shared, "The kiddos love their new bears and will cherish them forever! The kids are loving having a piece of their dad's uniform to keep with them, in a way that is useful to them. Thank you, Blue Line Bears."

Legacy of Healing to provide support during National Domestic Violence Awareness Month

By Calvin Valdillez

“We want our community to realize that domestic violence (DV) has many layers,” said Legacy of Healing (LOH) Victim Advocate, Marisa Chavez. “Typically, people who are victims of domestic violence think that if they call law enforcement it’s because it’s something physical. But usually it starts emotional, then it goes to psychological – financial abuse, threats, and then becomes physical. So, this month, it’s about educating and providing information for people to realize that this is not okay that this is happening.”

A small building located on the corner of Waterworks and Marine Drive, next door to the Tulalip Bay Fire Station, is much more than meets the eye. Standing as a symbol of hope for many fleeing an abusive relationship, the building, which many people pass by on their everyday commute, is the home of the Tulalip Legacy of Healing, a program designed to support and uplift Tulalip tribal members, parents and spouses of Tulalip members, as well as other Natives who live on the reservation, through difficult and challenging times.

Upon entering the building, and meeting with the team’s staff of advocates, many DV victims and survivors begin to see a way out and are able to safely plan to escape their unhealthy partnerships.

A quick Google search will show that the Native American population are at an extremely higher risk for experiencing domestic violence than other races. According to the National Institute of Justice, 84% of Native women have experienced violence in their lifetime as well as 81% of Native men. That same study stated that ‘more than four in five American Indian and Alaskan Native women and men experienced DV in [2016] alone’.

It is important to keep in mind that the statistics from this particular study have been referenced in many publications since it was released, and that this is the most up to date study. Tulalip LOH and Child Advocacy Center (CAC) Director, Jade Carela believes that although these numbers are shocking, they may be much higher. Citing conversations with other advocacy center directors, she gathered that there has been a recent influx of victims since the pandemic first hit. Another reason these stats may be inaccurate can be credited to underreporting.

Said Jade, “One misconception that we want to make sure to clear up for our community is that a lot of people have been taught that domestic violence equates to physical violence. That’s not what domestic violence is. Domestic violence is many other things. To me it’s important for people to understand that, because I feel there are a lot of people in very unhealthy relationships that crossover into domestic violence and they might not realize that’s the type of relationship they’re in or that there is help when they’re in those type of relationships. A lot of domestic violence isn’t physical, and by the time it gets physical, there’s an end to it because they kill their spouse. Because they don’t recognize it as domestic violence, the victims don’t reach out for help.”

For this reason, it is important to understand what DV is exactly, that way if victims are able to identify that they are in a DV relationship, they can get out before it ever reaches an extreme scenario. Below is list of red flags curated by the LOH that serves as an indicator of an abusive partner.

- Wants to get serious right away.
- Humiliates you – calls you names or puts you down to break your confidence.
- Treats you better when other people are around
- Screams at you to intimidate you.
- Follows you or calls/texts repeatedly to check up on you.
- Pressures you to go along with what they want.
- Bullies or tries to humiliate you via text, social media, or e-mail.
- Throws, hits, or breaks things to make you afraid.
- Gets overly jealous when you spend time with friends or family.
- Tags you in posts, even though you have asked them not to.
- Insists that you give them your passwords to your voicemail, social media or e-mail accounts.
- Physically or sexually assaults you.
- Denies their abusive behavior.
- Gaslights you.
- All their exes are crazy except you.

The LOH extended their list to include red flags that increase your chance for being seriously hurt or even killed.

- Uses or threatens to use a gun, knife or other weapon.
- Threatens to kill your or themselves if the relationship ends.
- Tries to choke or strangle you.
- Forces you to have sex or physically assaults you.
- Is violently or constantly jealous.

Cassandra Rae, CAC Education Outreach Family Advocate, stated, “Often times part of the abuse is isolating you – cutting you off from family, friends, support systems. Having an advocate who is 100% there for you is such a huge part to finding the strength and the courage to leave an abusive situation. Often times there’s a lot of gaslighting. Part of the abuse can be cutting your self-esteem down – ‘people aren’t going to like you, people aren’t going to believe you, you’re making this up, you’re so emotional – that type of stuff. Sometimes people get so eroded, it’s so hard to have that voice to make that call. But that’s another really important part of the awareness work, to lift people up, to recognize how important and valuable our people are.”

Added Marisa, “Sometimes if an abuser is using kids against their partner they’ll say, ‘if you go to the cops, you’re going to lose the kids.’ That’s a real barrier to why people don’t leave because they’re trying to stay connected to their children. It’s so much more than hitting, it’s asserting power and control over someone, taking their choices away, taking their money away. If you don’t have access to money, or you have to get permission from your spouse, or you’re not allowed to see your family, those are some examples. Multiple texting in a time frame, calling to see where you are, putting trackers on your car, these are all tactics that people will do to control their partner. Those are things that a lot of people don’t recognize, they just think ‘oh he just wants to take care of me and know where I’m at’ – that’s not a healthy relationship.”

Nationwide, communities are taking part in an initiative to raise awareness about DV during the month of October. Over the past several years, both prior to and after the pandemic, the LOH team has been active during DV Awareness Month and held events to provide resources and information to those in the community in need of assistance.

“One of the core focuses with DV Awareness Month is the importance of breaking the silence,” expressed Sydney Gilbert, CAC/LOH Coordinator and Forensic Interviewer. “If people are not talking about it and it’s not coming to light, it lives in the shadow. The more we can talk about it, the more we can bring it to attention, the more we can normalize the conversation around it, I think it increases comfort for folks coming forward. It’s pervasive in the community. We know that there’s higher rates of intimate partner violence in communities that have experienced trauma. Another focus we have for this month is addressing that trauma, and not only bringing attention to intimate partner violence but bringing attention on how we can heal from that as a community.”

This year, the LOH is proud to announce that they will be hosting a number of events throughout October, with the goal in mind to open up discussion about what DV is within the community. Below is the list of events that the LOH will hold during the month. Each event will be held every Thursday, beginning at 5:30 p.m., in room 162 of the Tulalip Administration Building.

- Thursday, 10/6: Resolving Trauma Workshop
- Thursday, 10/13: Self-Defense Class (ADULTS ONLY - limited to first 20 people only. E-mail CRae@TulalipTribes-nsn.gov to register)
- Thursday, 10/20: Sisters Rising Film Screening (ages 14+)
- Tuesday, 10/25: Beading as Healing Class

Cassandra described what the DV Awareness Month events entail, “We’re doing a resolving trauma workshop that’s all about the latest research on trauma, so you can understand how it impacts your life, as well as how understanding your trauma is the first step to healing that trauma. We’re doing a beading as healing class. Connecting with traditional cultural practices are huge resiliency factors, and it’s connecting with your community, having an opportunity where you are beading together, and you can have those conversations. We’re also doing a self-defense class, and a film screening of a film called Sisters Rising.”

Noting that each situation is different, LOH understands that leaving an abusive partnership is extremely difficult and can sometimes involve the court systems. LOH wants to inform the community that if you are in a situation where you do have to go through court, they will be there to support you emotionally throughout the entire process. Additionally, LOH is careful not to pass any judgements and allows their clients grace and understanding, because statistically it could take a victim multiple times to leave an abusive relationship.

“Typically, it takes a survivor seven times to leave an abuser,” Marisa explained. “Talking to someone who can work with you, and help you be safe in your household so there’s not another incident, and help you plan to get out safely, that’s something that an advocate can help with.”

Jade agreed, “Because it does take them so many times to leave, if someone comes to utilize services through us, we know that they might go back. They’re always welcome to the LOH because we know that’s how it works. We don’t want community members to feel bad, or like they are stupid or weak. Those are definitely things that we never think about people because we know that this is the cycle, this is what they go through. And when they leave, it’s also the most dangerous time. It’s a huge risk for them. So, if they can just reach out to start doing some safety planning and talking to one of our advocates privately, they can start preparing and working up to what they need to do.”

The LOH stressed the fact that DV can happen to anybody regardless of race, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity, and social status. The team invites you to come out to show support and help raise awareness at the events throughout DV Awareness month. Another great way to show support is to participate in Wear Purple Day on October 20th.

And if you or anybody you know is experiencing an abusive relationship, please do not hesitate to call the LOH at (360) 716-4100 for assistance. And if you are in a crisis or an emergency situation, the LOH provided a list of three additional hotline numbers that you can utilize during your time of need:

- The National Domestic Violence Hotline 1-800-799-SAFE (7233)
- Strong Hearts Native Helpline: 1-844-762-8483
- Domestic Violence Services of Snohomish County 425-25-ABUSE (22873)

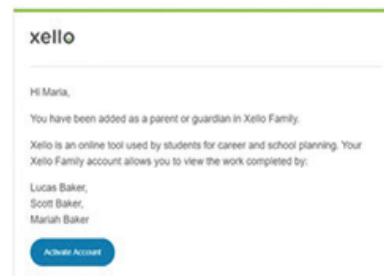

“This is still happening in our community,” Jade stated. “It’s something that we see happening every single day. If you are experiencing an abusive relationship, the first thing you need to do is call us. By calling us, it doesn’t mean the police need to get involved, it doesn’t even mean you have to work with us. You can just call and say you are interested in talking to an advocate, and you can have a private conversation with an advocate about what you are experiencing. From there, we can offer our services, and it’s important to have that connection so when you do become ready to leave, you can come back and see us later on.”

Heritage unveils new Xello Program!

This school year, Heritage High School along with all other MSD High Schools are bringing in a new tool to assist all students with their “High School and Beyond Plan” This tool is extremely important for all students to take an active interest in their future planning for after high school. As a parent or community member you may hear the word Xello (pronounced Zello) in conversation with your students. There is also a way for parents to check in and monitor their students’ progress as well. Below, you will find more information from the MSD Website with contact information if you have questions.....as a point of interest in your child’s education, you may want to ask them.....Can you show me your Xello portfolio? That is a great way to engage in relevant conversation with your student about their education and future aspirations. As always parents and community are welcome in our school as well!

Xello Family Access Coming Soon!

In November you will receive a welcome email from xello.world inviting you to join our Xello platform. This will allow you to embark on a college and career journey alongside your student as an observer. You will have access to view student interests, career matches and activity progress, as well as participate in the same lessons as your student to explore college and career options with a demo account. Watch for this exciting feature coming soon to your inbox. Please accept the invitation to join us when it arrives!
