Smoke Signals: Local teens use creativity to combat vaping

By Calvin Valdillez, photos courtesy of the Tulalip Community Health Department

This past February, the Tulalip Community Health (TCH) department announced a month-long art contest which was open exclusively to Native American students who attend either a middle or high school within the Marysville School District (MSD). Leading up to the contest, Community Health visited each of those Jr. and Sr. high schools and dropped some important knowledge on the tribal students about the dangers of vaping and smoking e-cigarettes.

Senior Center Policy amendment

The Senior Center Policy travel stipend was increased to $100.

General Council Motions

- The motion passed to increase the GW to 40% of the previous year's TGO EBIDA with a 3-year cap. Which comes out to $1,650 per month and a bonus of 3,500. This amount is actually over the 40%, however we funded the additional amount through the residual funds that had built up.
- The Life Long learning policy has increased the youth services activities funding to $4,000 per year.

- Motion passed to look into how to protect the children's tribal money, who are in Beda? Chelh or wards of the state.
- Motion passed to develop an RFP to met the intent of the financial audit with a scope of work to go out to bid.
- Motion passed to have a strategic meeting with the Elder's Commission, Elder's Program and the Elder's Construction Department to meet the intent of the motion.

Golf Course

We were disappointed that the Battle Creek Golf Course sale did not go through, due to a disagreement on leasing terms. We agreed to a 5-year lease; they wanted a 10-year lease with an automatic additional 10-years added on. We made an offer to purchase the property outright, however they turned it down at this time.

Olympia

Last week Misty Napeahi, Treaty Rights Office staff Ryan Miller, AJ Dotzauer, Rocio Jack and I went to the Washington State Capital and had several meetings with Senators. We are pleased to announce the House and the Senate approved the additional funding of $19.3 million for our Road Construction projects on 4th street and 88th street. It still has to pass out of the budget committee. This project will go out to bid soon and will begin early in 2024, and should be completed within two years. This is the project that includes 7 roundabouts; 4 which will be on our side of the freeway.

We also met on the House Bill 1555, that would have undermined our off – reservation police department warrant process. The bill was denied. There will be future meetings to work on reciprocity for tribes throughout the state, that will be brought forward at the next Governor's Centennial Accord meeting.

Another topic we addressed was asking for our Tulalip Creek Hatchery request to be fully funded. They proposed to give us $1 million of the $3.78 million we submitted.

Another bill that passed was to allow Tribal Police Officers to be able to participate in the Washington State Law enforcement Pension Program. We will still have to work out the details. This will help us retain officers.

Columbarium

We are happy to announce that the Eagle Memorial that is located at the Mission Beach cemetery has been spiritually blessed. This monument has 95 compartments, that could fit two boxes of ashes. The name, birth and death dates will be engraved on the front plate, along with a picture(s). For those of you who would like to utilize the columbarium for your family members ashes, contact Candy Hill.

Road to Healing Meeting

We received a request from Secretary of the Department of Interior, Deb Haaland and Assistant Secretary, Brian Newland, to host "the Road to Healing" event here at Tulalip. The Community, Tribal leaders, and Boarding School Survivors have been invited to attend. The event will be at the Gathering Hall on Sunday April 23rd at 10am – 4pm. There will be reserved seating for Boarding School Survivors and their families, and elders. Parking at the Gathering Hall and on the adjacent street will be reserved for elders. Additional parking will be at TELA, the Health Clinic, the Boys and Girls club and the Tribal Admin building. Transportation will be provided from the additional parking areas. Space will be limited.

Upcoming Summits

National Fentanyl and Opioid Summit at the Tulalip Resort Casino August 22-24 hosted by the Northwest Portland Area Indian Health Board, National Indian Health Board, Tribal Opioid Response, Tribal Self Governance and Tribes.

TGO

The TGO is currently advertising two positions; the Executive Vice President of Casino Administration and Executive Vice President of Casino Operations. These two positions will report directly to the TGO President/COO or designee. We welcome tribal members to apply.

Cultural Events

We have some upcoming Cultural events, dates and time may be changed due to other events. Cultural Nights, Tuesdays 5:30pm, Dining Hall Canoe Practice, Wednesdays 6pm, Tulalip Marina.

Salmon Ceremony Practice, Thursday 5:30pm, Gathering Hall (starts on 4/27)

Board Retreat

We started this week off with a Board retreat and below are some of the discussion points we went over:

- Team work, Rules of Engagement
- Expectations, Code of Ethics
- Setting our priorities
- Economic Development

We look forward to moving forward in the best interest of the tribe.

Thank you all for taking time to read my chair report, we hope this helps to keep us all informed on future events.

By Micheal Rios

When the Native-led, local nonprofit Indigenous Beginnings launched in July 2021, the mission was simple: to freely give and share traditional teachings through in-person, hands-on cultural workshops taught by inspirational knowledge keepers.

Created by Tulalip Court executive administrative assistant Stephanie Cultee, herself a Nooksack citizen and a dedicated employee of the Tulalip Tribes enterprise since 2008, Indigenous Beginnings has hosted 44 workshops thus far. Each intricately designed workshop is intended to help spread the cultural teachings of Coast Salish tribes, while sharing the diversity of knowledge from Native culture bearers in both urban and reservation-based settings.

The culturally appropriate nonprofit continues to be dedicated to teaching tribal and nontribal participants how to sustainably harvest, prepare traditional foods, and how to weave, carve and otherwise transform natural resources into utility-filled items. Hosted events have included making delicious jelly from fireweed, harvesting devil's club and mountain huckleberry, weaving cedar into baskets and headbands, carving canoe paddles, making traditional round drums, and even how to clean, fillet and smoke salmon. Workshops have primarily been led by Tulalip, Nooksack, Lummi and Quinault citizens.

"With Indigenous Beginnings, all of our workshops are for all ages," explained Stephanie. "There was a whole generation that couldn't practice or learn their ways from their grandparents because of the boarding school era. So for those older generations who want to learn, they can attend our workshops which is just as much designed for them as any adult or youth. This way we can not only keep our elders involved in their culture, but have them set that example for the young ones that it's okay to ask questions and admit there's always more to learn."

"I am from Nooksack and moved down here when I was 15-years-old," she continued. "I have three daughters who are Tulalip, and I want them to learn their Tulalip heritage and Nooksack's as well because they are descendants from Nooksack, too. I didn't know much about my tribe, because I moved away when I was young, and I thought this could be a way that I could teach them the traditional ways of their people, while also learning myself."

It was in that spirit of cultural understanding and community building that Indigenous Beginnings hosted an awe-inspiring workshop at the Hibulb Cultural Center centered on created cedar roses. Lushootseed teacher Maria Rios instructed the full classroom in the basics of cedar weaving 101, which included at times having her infant son Enzo harnessed belly side.

The diverse group of eager learners spanned multiple generations. They sat intently as Maria detailed how Coast Salish tribes believe the Creator gave their people cedar as a gift. Cedar was the perfect resource, providing tools, clothes, baskets and carvings in addition to having medicinal and spiritual purposes. After being harvested and stored for future use, the highly sought after golden inner bark is separated into strips and intricately shredded for weaving. The processed bark can then be used as a malleable material, similar to wool and other synthetic fibers, and crafted into baskets, clothing, or, as in this particular case, long-lasting roses.

Among the workshop participants was Tulalip mother/daughter duo Carlotta and Cheylah. After receiving a few of the finer weaving pointers from Maria, they quickly found a groove and feverishly created a couple dozen cedar roses. Of course, in the traditional way, Carlotta gave away her first made rose to elder Rebecca Hunter.

"I've wanted to relearn how to make cedar roses for a long time now. I was originally taught by the late Tara Taylor over twenty years ago, but unfortunately I lost the teaching by not practicing enough," shared Carlotta. "My daughter Cheylah is 13-years-old and kind of at the hardheaded phase, so I wasn't sure if she'd want to come with me or not at first. But then she was so excited to join after I told her Miss Maria was the instructor. I'm so happy we got to participate and learn together. We had a lot of fun."

The memorable afternoon was filled with a type of whimsical family bonding that was once common place among tribal villages. With babies, teenagers, adults, and elders all sharing in a unified experience of weaving with yellow cedar. Some for the first time. Others for the first time in a long time. And still others who had only dreamed of one day having the opportunity to create cedar roses in a similar fashion as their ancestors once did.

Such is the case with Seattle resident Shyanne Steele of the Colville Confederated Tribes. She shared having memories of being a little girl and watching her grandma, also a language teacher, weave all kinds of items. When she came across a flyer for the cedar rose workshop on Facebook she jumped at the opportunity to attend.

“Lately, I’ve been thinking a lot about how to get more connected with traditional art forms because it’s so difficult for me given my tribe is far away. Then, just a few nights ago, I actually dreamt about harvesting cedar,” said the 24-year-old University of Washington student. “Being able to attend and interact with so many welcoming tribal members here was amazing. It really grounded me to the teachings we have about cedar. Beyond being a super cool and strong material to work with, it’s been central to Indigenous life in this area for countless generations and really helps us connect with our ancestors.”

By bringing tribal citizens of different generations together in an atmosphere of learning and sharing, the Indigenous Beginnings cedar rose workshop allowed participants an opportunity to connect with Natives of neighboring tribes and form meaningful relationships based on shared interests and experiences.

Whether it’s to learn new skills or refine existing ones, the active participation in our shared culture is how we help maintain a strong connection between the past, present, and future. Ensuring that important cultural knowledge and traditional knowhow is preserved and passed on to future generations.

After establishing trust with the students, to ensure their anonymity, the department learned some key details about the usage of the electronic nicotine sticks and ‘vape juice’ within the community – the how, where, and why.

TCH Community Resource Coordinator, Kelly Prayerwarrior, shared, “We created a safe space at the very beginning, and let them know that we are not going to tell people who said what, we just want to get an idea of what’s going on. And they opened up and told us that kids are smoking at school in the bathrooms, on the bus, and that they basically are smoking everywhere.”

Over the past decade, numerous studies and reports were conducted by the likes of the CDC, FDA, the Surgeon General, and the American Lung Association about the relation to teens and vaping. An eye-opening statistic comes from the Truth Initiative about how widespread vaping has become in recent years. You may recognize the organization’s name from anti-vaping ads and commercials that air on both cable and YouTube. Their 2022 National Youth Tobacco Survey revealed that among teens nationwide, 42% admitted to using an e-cigarette within the thirty-day time period of which the study took place, while 27.6% of high schoolers confessed to vaping on a daily basis.

When asked about the appeal of vaping to the youth of our community, Kelly shared her insight and stated, “I think it’s because they are able to get ahold of it, they have easy access to it, it doesn’t smell. The kids who I talked to said that they are getting it from their family members who vape, and also their friends at school. I think it’s also the flavors and because it’s something new. And they’re seeing their community members and family members doing it, so they think it’s okay because everyone else is doing it.”

She continued, “It is an addiction. I see people walk around the store smoking their vape and many of them don’t know that they are inhaling lots of chemicals into their bodies, a lot of those same chemicals are used in cigarettes. There’s a term called popcorn lung, that’s caused from when the water of the vape gets into the lungs. It also fogs people’s mind, it raises their blood pressure, and it can cause irritability in the people who are addicted to it. When they don’t have it, they get irritable.”

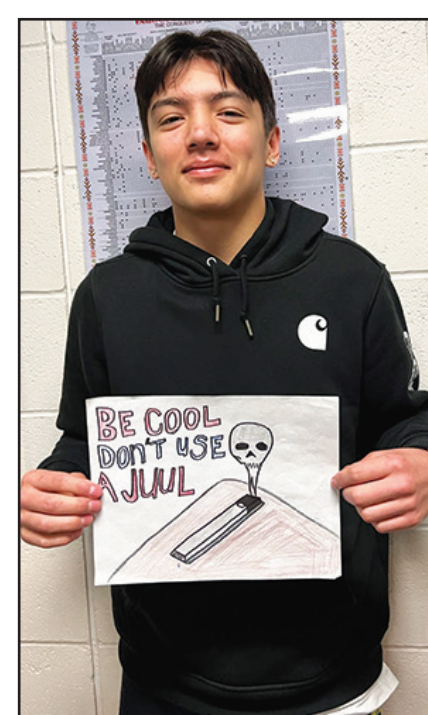

Upon chatting with the students about the harm vaping can cause an individual’s health and wellbeing, TCH announced the Anti-Vape Art Contest. The teens were asked to create a poster to combat the growing trend of vaping on the reservation and within the MSD. The kids were informed that the winner’s artwork would be the visual for a new campaign against vaping and that their work would be shared all throughout Tulalip and Marysville. Fifteen students took on the challenge and were motivated not only by creating a smoke-free environment locally, but also by a number of prizes including a Nintendo Switch bundle and Apple AirPods.

After much deliberation, due to the all the amazing artwork submitted, TCH announced the winner of the contest. Tribal member, Heaven Jones, brought home the grand prize thanks to her informative design which depicts all the negative effects that vaping has on the human body. Her impressive anatomy artwork pinpoints exactly where the damage of vaping takes place, and around her subject's wrist are handcuffs. Heaven cleverly uses the technique of steganography to display the word 'addiction' as the links in the handcuffs.

"I'm proud of how the artwork turned out and I'm glad to know that people will learn from my poster," expressed Heaven. "Hopefully it will help change how they think about vaping and realize what it could do to and how it affects their body. I am very grateful.

This contest was important to me because I have people in my family who vape, and I've seen them try to stop and seen how hard it is. What they have to go through when they aren't vaping, and how they act, it makes me want them to be able to stop."

Heaven shared that she also submitted four original pieces to the upcoming Native American Student Art Festival, that is organized by the Tulalip Education Division and the MSD Indian Education Department.

Lorina, Heaven's mother, proudly stated, "She is a very talented artist. She really wanted to take part in this contest because of her family members and others in the community who do vape. She worries about everyone who does it."

Heaven's artwork will soon be plastered on the walls and hallways of several tribal department buildings in the near future, as well as at the Tulalip Administration Building, the Tulalip Boys and Girls Club, and various places throughout the MSD.

Said Kelly, "Everyone made really great art and I want them to get credit for participating in the contest. And I really wanted to highlight our winner because she put a lot of effort into her artwork and that's the piece we are going to be using. It was heartwarming to see how many young leaders stepped up, because each one of them showed leadership by creating their art and making a statement with their work."

Higher ED can help young adults get a general education diploma or high school diploma

Submitted by Josh Cleveland, Higher Education Specialist

Why GED or HS Diploma?

- Increase Your Self-Esteem
- Better job opportunities
- Chance for college, technical school, or vocational education

What is an HS Diploma?

The HS Diploma is a record attained from going through courses at the high school level with passing grades.

What is a GED?

GED is equivalent to the HS Diploma. Colleges, universities, and technical or vocational schools usually accept GEDs.

Which to choose?

Both GED and HS Diplomas are relatively the same—both open options for employment, or opportunities for college and universities, technical, or vocational education.

Although, some schools or universities prefer HS Diploma over GED. To get over a GED hurdle, a prospective student could take courses to attain an associate degree to transfer into a university that prefers the High School Diploma over the GED.

Requirements:

The GED or HS Diploma courses or programs need some form of accreditation. Higher ED can review these to prove accreditation. Most state, regional, or federal accreditation is acceptable. Accreditation reviews will be on a case-by-case basis.

Additionally, the program must have unofficial transcripts upon graduation to prove courses were taken. We cannot allow places that only give a diploma, as a diploma alone does not prove courses or coursework were gone through and learned.

Please inform Higher ED before enrolling or registering for a program to help ensure the cost is covered. A Higher ED packet, tribal ID, and an invoice (from an accredited program) are general requirements Higher ED needs to cover the program's costs.

Costs:

The Tulalip Tribes cover the cost of GED or HS Diploma courses for enrolled Tulalip Tribal members.

Locations of courses:

For adults, GED and HS Diploma courses in-person are limited. There are some in-person courses for GED or HS Diploma, but it is subject to what schools are currently offering. Due to limited in-person, hybrid (online and in-person) are usually limited. Although, online courses are more often available for adults and are becoming the standard for many institutions.

For more information about in-person, hybrid, or online GED or HS Diploma courses, feel free to reach out to Higher ED.

GED or HS Diploma for Youth:

Depending on the student's age, GED or HS Diplomas may have to go through Youth Activities/Education or Higher ED. This will be on a case-by-case basis. Feel free to contact Higher ED or Youth Activities (Phone: 360-716-4909) for Youth.

GED or HS Diploma:

Please refer to Higher ED or Higher ED's website for references of currently acceptable institutions for GED or HS Diplomas.

A couple of options we currently use, are either Penn Foster (online HS Diploma program), or Everett Community College [EvCC] (for GED or HS Diploma). The GED program through EvCC can either be all online, or we have an in-person session on Tuesdays from 5 PM – 6:30 PM in the C-2 building.

Likewise, institutions not listed may be brought to Higher ED to review accreditation on a case-by-case basis. Link: <https://www.tulaliptribes-nsn.gov/Dept/Higher-Education>
